OFFICIAL CAREER OF LOOMIS OVER.

Proof of Connection with Orinoco Company Previous to Venezuela Appointment the Last Straw.

TO LOSE PROMISED POST.

Notoriety Following Publication of Letters Between Corporation Heads Too Odoriferous.

BY RAYMOND.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The publication of the correspondence leading up to the appointment of Francis B. Loomis as minister to Venezuela resulting from a corporation fight in New York, it is believed, will put an end to his official career and deprive him of the diplomatic position he had been slated for when he was dropped from the state department.

The letters printed do not show that Mr. Loomis sought the place with any improper motive, but the correspondence clearly shows that the men back of the Orinoco Improvement company pushed his candidacy because they believed that with him as minister to Venezuela they could secure what they wanted by pressure from the United States government.

The case is entirely different from that of the asphalt company, with which the assistant secretary of state has been charged with undue friendliness.

The Orinoco company never was anything much of a corporation except on paper, and it has been a financial graveyard for dozens of men for many years. The appointment of Mr. Loomis as minister to Venezuela was not secured by these corporation schemers.

Appointment a Personal Favor.

It was a personal matter with President McKinley and the appointment was not made as the result of political pressure to any great extent. That the promoters of the Orinoco Improvement company found out that Mr. Loomis was going to be appointed and endeavored to make themselves solid with him in advance is probable.

That he was friendly to these men after he went to Venezuela is possible, but as the Orinoco Improvement never amounted to much his connection with that concern, if any, has not created as much comment as his supposed friendliness for the asphalt trust.

In 1896 Mr. Loomis, who had previously been a Washington correspondent, was detailed by the United Press association for special work at Canton, O., the home of Mr. McKinley, whose nomination for the presidency seemed to be more and more certain.

Mr. Loomis had known Mr. McKinley in Washington quite intimately, as most of the correspondents did, and during the months at Canton prior to the election he improved the acquaintance.

Put Was a Wedding Present.

As a matter of course he was given the confidence of Mr. McKinley in the distribution of news to the United Press papers, and he really had a good many claims of a personal character by which he subsequently made good when the republicans were successful and President McKinley came to Washington with an entire list of diplomatic and domestic appointments to be filled.

About this time Mr. Loomis married the daughter of a wealthy citizen of Springfield, O., and the family into which he wedded was also friendly to McKinley.

As a wedding present the president-elect told Mr. Loomis that he would appoint him to a good diplomatic position in South or Central America, where he would have no burdens in the way of entertainment, and could expect to live within his salary. The president took a good deal of delight in telling people of his unique wedding present, and the story was published at the time in THE TRIBUNE.

Connections Not a Tangible Asset.

According to the letters published in New York "Charlie" Kurtz, who was then the chairman of the republican state committee in Ohio, had particular charge of Mr. Loomis' embassy. He was a promoter and was interested in a great many corporations, several of which, while honest enough in their way, did not have any too good a standing in the financial world.

He was just the man to be mixed up with such a concern as the Orinoco Improvement company, whose only tangible asset was a visionary sort of concession from the South American republic, and even that was canceled and given away to a rival concern.

Mr. Kurtz at that time was not an intimate friend of Mr. McKinley, although as he was chairman of the state central committee he kept on ostensibly good terms with the president-candidate.

Subsequently he deserted both Mr. McKinley and Mr. Hanna and did the best he could to beat Mr. Hanna in the senate. He was driven out of Ohio politics and his friendship for Mr. Loomis at any time after the earliest days of the McKinley administration would not have been of any advantage to the new minister.

Accepted Corporation's Help.

The letters printed in New York are all of a date prior to or just at the time of the appointment of Mr. Loomis as United States minister to Venezuela. They do not supply, it is said, any new information or throw much light on the dispute between Mr. Loomis and Mr. Bowen.

They, however, do show conclusively that Mr. Loomis, while still a candidate for the position of minister, accepted the help of the officers of the corporation, which inevitably must appeal to him for assistance of a diplomatic character in establishing the validity of its concessions.

The letters show, at least, the gross impropriety which Secretary Taft referred to in his report on the Bowen-Loomis squabble, which resulted in the dismissal of Mr. Bowen, but which was, after all, a bitter rebuke to the assistant secretary of state for his "indiscretions while minister to Venezuela."

Furthermore, it is quite evident that immediately after his appointment as minister Mr. Loomis called on the officers of the Orinoco company and had a series of personal conferences at which there was unfolded to him the scheme for a refunding of the Venezuela debt, which was the matter particularly referred to by Secretary Taft in his report.

New Notoriety Last Straw.

It has been understood at the state department all along that Mr. Loomis would be dropped by the administration at the earliest possible moment. He became persona non grata in Venezuela and was succeeded by Mr. Bowen.

ARMIES TO TARRY FOR 18 MONTHS.

Evacuation of Manchuria Delayed—All Trade Nations Affected—China May Protest.

WILL SIGN TREATY TODAY

Convention to Be Indorsed Officially by Plenipotentiaries at 5 O'Clock This Afternoon.

BY JOHN CALLAN O'LAUGHLIN.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The treaty of peace and friendship between Russia and Japan, to be known in history as the "treaty of Portsmouth," will be signed at 5 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the conference room of the Portsmouth navy yard.

Mr. Sato, spokesman of the Japanese mission, stated tonight that only the work of copying remained to be done. The Japanese and Russians are making two copies each, one in English, the other in French. The French copy will be accepted as binding in case of dispute over the meaning of a clause or phrase.

"I am glad," M. de Witte said to THE TRIBUNE correspondent, "that the work is finished. It has been a hard task, but we've obtained the results the whole world desired."

M. de Witte was asked if he believed the Japanese have been magnanimous. He smiled satirically and answered:

"I think Japan found it to her interest to make concessions."

Leave Troops in Manchuria 18 Months.

A decision was reached by the plenipotentiaries today which will come as a regrettable surprise to trading nations. Manchuria, it has been determined, will remain in possession of the Japanese and Russian forces for eighteen months from the date of the signature of the treaty.

This leisurely withdrawal undoubtedly will provoke considerable criticism because it seems to have been determined upon in order to imprint forever the influence of the belligerents in parts of the region which hereafter they will regard as respective spheres of influence.

The ostensible reason for the delay in evacuating Manchuria is that it is extremely difficult to remove in a shorter space of time the tremendous number of men who now are facing each other.

There are under command of Gen Linevitch practically a million men, the greater part of whom are intrenched before the army of Field Marshal Oyama in the vicinity of Kuangendatse, at Harbin, and along the line between Harbin and Vladivostok.

Field Marshal Oyama has about 600,000 men directly under command, and several Japanese armies are operating in northern Corea and other points.

Russia claims she cannot withdraw rapidly because the capacity of the Transsiberian railroad is limited.

Japan Really Left in Possession.

Details of the evacuation would not be interesting, save for the slow movement which has been agreed upon. It will be considered complete when the Japanese forces have crossed the frontier of Manchuria into Corea and are in the Liaotung peninsula. The fact that the Russians agreed to this proposal is accepted by the Japanese as another evidence of the recognition of their possession of Corea.

The Liaotung peninsula, by the terms of the treaty, is placed under Japanese protectorate; by this agreement it is regarded as de facto in Japanese possession.

The first step toward evacuation will be simultaneous. The Russians will fall back to Harbin, the Japanese to a point near Mukden. This will be accomplished within four months, and the details will be left to the commanders in the field. The second movement will be more extensive, and the third will witness the complete withdrawal.

It reminds one of two men backing out of a room by different doors, each afraid to take a step longer than the other because his "dignity" will be affected. The Japanese have made a concession to the Russians in this matter, because it gives the latter a chance to substantiate the contention made by the czar's plenipotentiaries that Russia is not a beaten nation.

China Will Strenuously Object.

It will be the duty of Japan to restore Manchuria to the administration of China, but Russia is confident of her ability to take some step which will enable her to participate in this ceremony.

China undoubtedly will make strenuous objection to the lengthy occupation of Manchuria which Japan and Russia have determined upon. She had expected to regain possession of the northern province immediately after the ratification of the treaty. She had gone to the point, in fact, of calling upon viceroys and ministers abroad for the expression of their views as to measures which should be adopted to restore completely the administration of Manchuria.

Chinese authorities are concerned over the prospect that they will experience the same difficulty in connection with the withdrawal of Russia and Japan as they had in bringing about the evacuation of Great Britain and Germany out of Shanghai after the boxer revolt.

It will be recalled that fearing the extension of the Peking trouble to Shanghai, the consuls there called upon the respective governments for troops. Germany and Great Britain hastened to act in order to assert their interest in the tremendously rich valley of the Yangtsekiang river.

Great Britain always claimed this region to be in her sphere of influence, but Germany, which recognized the value and possibilities of trade among its millions of people, declined to recognize the claim in any way. Even today Germany suspects Great Britain of seeking to extend her sovereignty over this portion of China.

Will History Repeat Itself.

When tranquility had been restored to China, the Peking government made representations to both Great Britain and Germany to withdraw. The two nations were willing to retire, but one was afraid to leave before the other, because of the impression that it would make on thousands of Chinese.

China remembers that difficult period with concern and fears it will be repeated in Manchuria. It is apparent that these fears are on the point of realization.

The United States and other trading nations are affected directly, for the reason that so long as Manchuria remains under the military control of the Russians and Japanese

WOMEN'S PLEAS AID RESCUE.

Five Men in Boat and Six Left on Vessel Thought Lost.

Ashland, Wis., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Eleven men of the crew of the ore steamer Sevona, which went on Sand island reef off York island on Friday night, are believed to have been lost, either with the wreck or in an attempt to reach land in a boat, from which nothing has been heard.

One of the two boats which put off from the vessel, with four women and seven men aboard, including Chief Engineer Phillippi, reached shore on Little Sand bay, after a night of struggling against the storm.

Eleven Probably Perished.

Among the supposed dead are:

DARWIN, LEWIS, Medinah, O., first mate.

M'DONALD, CAPT. E. S., Northeast, Pa., commander of Sevona.

VAUVLECK, ——, Erie, Pa., oiler.

EIGHT MEMBERS of crew of vessel; names unknown.

Capt. McDonald, two mates, and three members of the crew remained on the unsubmerged portion of the wreck when the boats put off. When a tug, guided from Bayfield by Engineer Phillippi, reached the wreck today nothing could be found of the men left there.

The party that reached shore owes its safety to the pleading of several women among the passengers, who, when the crew, utterly discouraged by suffering, was ready to give up the struggle, urged the men to new efforts. Those rescued are:

Clucky, Mrs., West Bay City, Mich.
Clucky, C. H., Buffalo, N. Y.
Fiden, Adam and Nicholas, Buffalo, N. Y.
Jones, Miss, Erie, Pa.
Phillips, Mrs. William, Buffalo, N. Y.
Spencer, Mrs. S. F., Erie, Pa.
Four members of the crew of the Sevona.

The Sevona, ore laden, from Allouez to Erie, ran ashore in a heavy northeaster. Soon afterward it broke in two at the fourth hatch, the aft end of the boat sinking.

The first boat off was in charge of the first engineer. After battling with the waves all night, dawn broke with land in sight and the party reached shore after several attempts to land at Little Sand bay.

There they met a homesteader, who accompanied them to the nearest farmhouse, a distance of over two miles. All the members of the party were safely cared for by the Rabideau and Smith families, with the exception of the engineer, who, with Al Thibadeau, a homesteader, set out with a team for Bayfield.

Travels Far for Aid.

This trip took until 4 o'clock this afternoon, as they were compelled practically to cut a way through the forest. Upon reaching Bayfield the tug Harrow, in command of Capt. Anderson with a party of volunteer life savers on board, immediately set out for the scene of the wreck to rescue the captain and five men left on the forward end of the vessel.

Three Women Drown in Hudson.

Hudson, N. Y., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Mrs. Margaret McCabe of Coxsackie, N. Y., Mrs. Sarah Brown of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Mary Bedell, the latter returning from the funeral of her husband, were drowned in the Hudson river this evening, when the little propeller, Young America, on which they were passengers, was sunk by a collision with the ferryboat George H. Power. The others of the twenty-five passengers on the Young America narrowly escaped, for it sank almost immediately after being struck.

Steamer Sinks Near Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., Sept. 3.—While entering the harbor this morning in the heavy gale the big steamer Northwind of the Mutual line was dashed against the concrete pier and a hole twelve feet long was torn in its side. It sank in twenty-two feet of water.

Tow Collides with Tug.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Sept. 3.—In the southeast gale and rain last night the steamer George Stephenson, towing the barge J. A. Roebling, ran aground at Point Aux Pins. After the steamer struck, the momentum of the Roebling carried it into the stern of the Stephenson, disabling the steering gear of the latter and causing other damage.

APOLOGY FOR TAFT INSULT ASKED BY CONSUL GENERAL.

Chinese Viceroy Promises to Make the Proper Amends on Account of the Posters Displayed at Canton.

HONGKONG, Sept. 3.—United States Consul General Lay has demanded an apology from the viceroy for the insulting posters displayed at Canton which resulted in the decision of Secretary Taft to abandon his visit to that city. The viceroy has given ample assurance that the leaders will be arrested and given severe punishment.

Secretary Taft and party arrived yesterday. They had intended to visit Canton and were to be escorted up the river by a British gunboat. Feeling in Canton against Americans has been bitter of late in connection with the boycott of American goods, and the walls have been placarded with fulminations against all Americans.

Consul General Bragg at Canton was consulted, and he strongly advised against the visit. Secretary Taft, until today, was determined to go. He thought better of it, however, and abandoned the trip at the last moment.

Secretary Taft and Miss Roosevelt were entertained today at a luncheon by Sir Matthew Nathan, governor of Hongkong.

Gen. Corbin and staff will return the calls of the military and naval commanders.

BAPTIST THEOLOGIAN WEDS AS CURE FOR NERVOUSNESS.

Prof. E. W. Johnson Marries Upon Suggestion of Head of Institution—Wife Dead Only Seven Months.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Upon the suggestion of Henry G. Weston, president of the Crozer Theological seminary, Upland, Pa., the Rev. Elias H. Johnson, professor of systematic theology in the institution, a wealthy preacher of the Baptist faith, author and lecturer, married Miss Lillian B. Morgan Saturday, about seven months after the death of his wife. Dr. Johnson is 64 years old and his bride about twenty-five years younger.

After the death of his wife Dr. Johnson grew irritable, according to Dr. Weston.

"I saw long ago that what Dr. Johnson needed was a helpmate," Dr. Weston says, "and I encouraged the marriage in every way."

BOMB WOUNDS 60 PERSONS.

Infernal Machine Explodes in a Crowd of Pleasure Seekers.

Attempted Assassination at Barcelona Slaughters Innocents.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BARCELONA, Sept. 3.—The explosion of a bomb placed in the midst of a crowd of pleasure seekers on the marine parade this afternoon resulted in the serious injury of nearly sixty persons. One man was killed outright and five others were mortally wounded.

The force of the explosion was terrific and was felt throughout the city. Pieces of flesh, hats, parasols, and wearing apparel were strewn for blocks around. Everywhere were pools of blood.

The detonation was heard for miles. A coachman fifty yards away was thrown from the seat of his carriage.

A wild panic followed and the air was rent with the screams of the dying and the injured.

Perpetrator Is Unknown.

The perpetrator of the outrage is unknown. The bomb, which was filled with nails and scrap iron, was conical in shape and covered with cement.

One witness says that early this morning a child was seen to deposit the infernal machine at the foot of a tree. Another version is that it was put there this afternoon and that the man who carried it was injured by the premature explosion.

Whether it was the work of a revolutionist who sought to assassinate an official in the crowd, or of a maniac whose sole purpose was to kill as many as possible at one stroke, is unknown.

Plot to Murder Officials?

It is said that the outrage is the result of a plot to kill certain officials who would have passed the spot where the explosion took place a few minutes later, and whose escape is due to the fact that the fuse burned too rapidly and that the explosion occurred prematurely. A rigid investigation is being made by the police.

A workman covered with blood while running away from the scene was pursued by a mob which believed him to be responsible for the outrage. He was caught and nearly lynched. The man was taken to a hospital, where he denied he had exploded the bomb.

PERILOUS RIDE ON ENGINE PILOT

Railroad Man Struck by Engine Carried Twenty-eight Miles and Found Later by Side of the Road.

Sedalia, Mo., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—After being struck by an express train and carried twenty-eight miles on the pilot of an engine, Warren Prine of this city told of a terrible experience when picked up near Tipton this morning. Tipton is twenty-seven miles east of Sedalia. Prine, who is a railroad man, was crossing the Missouri Pacific tracks when he was struck by the train. He was rendered unconscious for a time, and does not remember all that happened. When found he was lying by the side of the track. One leg was broken. Unless he suffered internal injuries he will recover.

JEALOUSY CAUSES DOUBLE SHOOTING

G. C. Miller Fires Bullet Into His Head After Wounding Divorced Wife's Husband, L. B. Hill.

MAY SOLVE MIZE CASE.

Mrs. Hill, Whose Life Former Spouse Sought, Closely Resembles Murdered Woman.

Closely followed by detectives, seeking him for the attempted murder of his divorced wife and her husband two hours earlier, George C. Miller, once a wealthy board of trade operator, braced himself against the door of his room, at which the policemen were hammering for admittance last night, and shot himself through the head. Physicians have no hope for his recovery.

The attempted suicide, which took place in Miller's lodgings, at 4746 Calumet avenue, was the consequence of a shooting which occurred earlier in the evening at the boarding house of Mrs. Anna Walsh, 525 East Chicago avenue, of which Louis B. Hill, a stock broker, was the victim.

May Solve Mize Mystery.

That the affair may solve the Mize murder mystery is the declaration of Inspector Shippy of the East Chicago avenue station, who from admissions made by Mrs. Hill has learned that Miller had been seen in the district in which Mrs. Mize was killed, looking for his former wife, whom, it is said, he had sworn to kill on sight. The resemblance between Mrs. Hill and the murdered woman is remarkable, and the mistake of an enraged man may explain many of the heretofore inexplicable details of the murder near the Del Prado hotel which has baffled the police.

After hearing the story of Mrs. Hill the police inspector hurried to the Provident hospital, to which Miller had been taken, to secure if possible a statement from him, but Miller was found to be unconscious.

Divorced Less than Year Ago.

Shortly after 7 o'clock in the evening Miller made the attempt upon the lives of Mr. Hill and his wife. Mr. Hill has offices at the Monadnock building, and is 40 years old. Last March he married Mrs. Bessie Miller, who four months before had been granted a divorce from her husband by Judge Kavanagh. At that time Hill did not know of the existence of the former husband of his wife. Miller had prospered in the grocery business about the south side district in which he lived, and, growing tired of the trade, had sold his places and become a speculator on the board of trade.

His ventures were unsuccessful from the start, and in a short time he had lost most of the money accumulated in trade. The losses seemed to affect him. He became moody and abusive, frequently threatening to kill himself and his wife. Finally Mrs. Miller secured a divorce and fled from the city, fearing he would carry out his threats.

Learns of Ex-Husband's Threats.

Returning several months later, she took lodgings near the scene of the Mize killing, where she remained several months. After her marriage to Mr. Hill she learned that Miller was seeking her and she told the story to her husband. Fearing for the safety of his wife, the couple removed to the north side, although Mrs. Hill frequently visited friends near her former home.

For six weeks the two have been at the residence of Mrs. Walsh in Chicago avenue, during which time nothing was heard of Miller.

Last evening they had invited W. Hector Wade, 305 East Chicago avenue, and his wife to their rooms. The quartet had been seated in a reception room on the second floor, engaged in a game of cards for a short time when the door bell on the lower floor was rung. It was answered by Kate Walsh, a niece of Mrs. Walsh, who admitted Miller.

He was well attired and seemingly at ease, although his haggard expression was remarked by the young woman.

"I've called to see Mr. Hill on business," he said. "He lives on the second floor I believe. I'll go right up."

The young woman stepped aside to permit him to pass and he had ascended several stairs when he turned about and returned.

"I'll just leave this till I come down," he said, hooking the handle of a umbrella about a cane rack in the hall.

Opens the Door and Fires.

Going directly to the room of the couple, the door of which was slightly ajar, the man threw it wide. Inside the quartet were interested in the game, Mr. Hill at the end of the table facing the intruder. As he entered the room he held a revolver partly extended in his hand.

"Well, I've got you now," he shouted, as he pointed the weapon at Mr. Hill and fired. The bullet penetrated the right arm of Hill, shattering the bone near the elbow in a manner that probably will necessitate amputation. Staggering back the wounded man attempted to lift a chair to hurl it at his assailant, but his broken arm made the effort futile.

Tries to Kill Mrs. Hill.

Going closer to the terrified group Miller pointed the revolver at his former wife and pulled the trigger. Five times he attempted to discharge the weapon, but each time the hammer fell without discharging a cartridge. Mr. Wade had sought refuge in another room, but his wife stood her ground and hurled the deck of cards held in her hand at Miller. The shrieks of the women appeared to frighten the latter. He backed out of the room, closing the door.

At the foot of the stairway Miss Walsh and Mrs. Martha O'Rourke, who had heard the shot, confronted him. As the revolver was displayed by him both women fled to another room, and, taking his umbrella from the rack, Miller walked out. Dr. A. C. Eck was summoned to the place by telephone and attended to the injuries of Hill, advising his removal to a hospital.

For almost an hour the police were not notified of the affair, the first message coming in a telephone call from an unknown person. Inspector Shippy and Sergeant Sullivan, who went to the place, were unable to ascertain the identity of the assailant for many minutes. The man was not known to Mr. Wade or his wife, and Mr. and Mrs. Hill protested that they knew of no reason for the shooting and had not recognized the attempted murderer.

Tries in Vain to Shield Miller.

The injured man was taken to the Passavant hospital and his wife to the East Chicago avenue station. For some time she persisted in her alleged ignorance of the man's identity, but under the close quesclosing of the police official broke down and declared it was her former husband.

She told of the threatened vengeance of the man and declared he had sworn to kill her, even though he met her on a crowded thoroughfare. Her resemblance to Mrs. Mize was noted by the inspector, and, in answer to his question, Mrs. Hill admitted that she had suspected the murderer was her husband.

She told Miller's address, and Detectives McCune and McMahon were hurried to the south side. Arriving at the place, they found that Miller had entered fifteen minutes earlier and hurried to his room. Going to the door the policemen found it locked and the room unlighted.

Their movements were heard by the occupant, who lighted the gas in the room.

Miller Shoots Himself.

"We're detectives, and want to see you a moment," said McCune.

"All right; I expected you, and have been waiting," was the answer.

For a few moments there was no sound within, and again the detectives rapped on the panel.

"Here's the answer," called out the man, and the report of a revolver and sound of a falling body was heard in the room.

Throwing themselves against the door, the detectives burst it in, to find Miller stretched across the entrance. He had shot himself in the temple, and was unconscious.

Death Considered Certain.

At the Provident hospital, to which Miller was taken, the physicians declared there was little possibility of his recovering consciousness before death, which was but a matter of hours.

Unable to procure a statement from the dying man, Inspector Shippy, after the identification of Miller by Mrs. Hill, notified Capt. Backus of the Hyde Park station of the possible solution of the Mize mystery. Detectives from the station who had worked on the case were dispatched to find Mrs. Wilson, the companion of Mrs. Mize, and take her to the hospital in the attempt to identify Miller. They failed to find her, however. She is said to be with relatives on the north side.

Working on Mize Clew.

Descriptions of the murderer given by Mrs. Wilson tallied in some respects with that of Miller, who is known to have been in the territory about the Del Prado hotel recently.

"I think it extremely probable that a statement from Miller would solve the mystery of the Del Prado killing," said Inspector Shippy. "Knowing that his wife had lived in that part of the city he searched for her for many weeks, carrying a loaded revolver. The resemblance between Mrs. Mize and Mrs. Hill is close, and in the uncertain light of the spot where she was killed the chances for a mistake in identity are strong.

"When Mrs. Hill told me of her husband's hunt about the south side I asked her if the possibility of the man being her husband had struck her. She hesitated, then admitted that she believed him to be the man. The taking of the chatelaine bag was an incident that easily might have happened had Miller committed the murder."

The police descriptions of the Mize murderer sent to the various stations describe him as about 30 years old, 5 feet 8 inches in height, of slender build, and wearing a gray suit and white hat. Miller is 50 years old and nearly six feet tall.

Although more than 50 years old, Miller's age is not shown by his features. When he shot himself his false teeth fell out and his features looked shrunken. At the suggestion of the detectives a man went back to Miller's room and found the teeth. When they were put in his mouth his features appeared rounded out, giving a much closer resemblance to the description of the Mize murderer.

Daughter Resides with Miller.

Miller's lodgings at 4746 Calumet avenue are rented from Mrs. Dolly Smith. Miller's daughter, Marcia Miller, who is 23 years old, resided with her father. She left the house yesterday morning and did not return till late in the evening. When Mrs. Smith told her of the shooting she became hysterical with grief.

A long letter to her from her father was found in the room. It is thought to have been written by Miller after he shot Hill. Of the whole letter, containing several hundred words, but one sentence is legible. In that Miller blames his condition upon the girl's mother in this reproach:

Letter Mentions Life Policy.

"Things would have been different if she had given me the insurance policy on my life."

When asked concerning the letter Mrs. Hill said:

"Miller was insane through worry over his losses and attempts to perfect perpetual motion. During the twenty-seven years that I lived with Miller he was always attempting to discover the secret of perpetual motion. In that time he devised more than forty contrivances, all of which were failures.

"Six years ago, with $14,000 in bank, Miller started speculating. His dealings never increased this sum and a few months ago he was without money.

"He often threatened to kill me and the children and this prompted me to obtain a divorce. After the separation his attentions ceased until last June. Then, friends told me, Miller had again been threatening to kill me and to end his own life at the same time. I was advised to seek protection and was debating the advisability of such action only a few days ago.

"When Miller entered our home tonight I divined his intention at sight of him. I arose from the chair and ran toward a closet as Miller fired. Mr. Hill was between Miller and myself and he was struck by the bullet."

Hill Taken by Surprise.

Hill's story of the shooting is the same as that of his wife and Mr. and Mrs. Wade. He says he had never quarreled with Miller.

"I have held many conversations with Mr. Miller, and he had always been friendly with me," said Hill to Inspector Shippy. "I heard of his attempts to see my wife, but I paid but little attention to them."

Miller and his daughter for some time have taken their meals at a restaurant owned by A. C. Watkins, 730 Forty-seventh street.

"Miller had appeared to be morose for some time past," said Watkins. "During meal time he was silent and appeared to be despondent. It was apparent that he was worried over some matter. He sometimes spoke of losses on the board of trade, but I never knew him to say anything about his former wife."

FALLS FROM "L"; MAY DIE.

Injuries May Prove Fatal to Antonio Borska, Who Was Found Under West Side Structure.

Antonio Borska, 324 West Nineteenth street, fell from the Kedzie avenue station of the Metropolitan West Side Elevated railroad yesterday morning and suffered injuries which may cause his death. He was found unconscious under the structure by Sergeant Scully of the Lawndale station. One thigh and two ribs were broken. Borska was taken to the county hospital.

FIGHT FOR BABY ENDS IN MURDER.

Albert Brandl Is Mortally Wounded in Battle with Hammer and Bullets.

DIES LATER IN HOSPITAL.

Thomas Harris, Arrested on the Charge of Killing Brother-in-Law, Denies It.

Albert Brandl, 32 years old, an engineer who lived at 293 North Carpenter street, was mortally wounded yesterday noon in a fight with his brother-in-law, Thomas Harris, for the possession of Harris' 18 months old daughter. Brandl was taken to the county hospital, where he died an hour later.

Harris married Brandl's sister four years ago and they lived at 173 Carpenter street. Mrs. Harris left her husband soon after her marriage, because, she said, he would not support her. After her first child was born he induced her to return to him, but she left him again six months ago, taking her two children with her. Since then, it is said, Harris has made three attempts to kidnap his baby daughter. Each time Mrs. Harris or one of her brothers recovered the child.

Harris met George Brandl Saturday evening and said he wanted his daughter. Brandl replied that the baby was his sister's child and that the mother had the right to her custody. Harris then threatened to get the child on Sunday.

Fight with Pistols and Hammer.

He went to the residence of Brandl's mother, 159 North Union street, yesterday noon, accompanied by his brother Stephen, and demanded the child. A fight ensued, in which the Harris brothers were beaten about the head with a hammer, wielded by Albert Brandl. At the time he was shot Brandl had in his hand a revolver, with which he attempted to repel the Harris brothers. After he fell, his brother Simon seized the weapon and fired several shots at Thomas Harris.

After the shooting the Harris brothers escaped and were captured four hours later by Detectives Blaul and Welneke as they were going downtown on a West Lake street car.

Thomas Harris, after his arrest, admitted firing the shots from his revolver, but said he fired in the air. He declared that Brandl was killed by one of the shots fired by his own brother.

Mother Tells of Kidnaping.

"I refused to go back to my husband," Mrs. Harris said, "and then he began to beg me to let him take the child home with him. At first I refused and began divorce proceedings, charging him with drunkenness and non-support, so that he could not take her away from me.

"Last July, while Rosie was on the front steps with my sisters, my husband came along and took her. He told my sister he was going to take her to the corner and buy some oranges for her. He did not bring her back for two days. My two brothers had to go to his parents' home and get her while Tom was away. Since then we have been afraid to let her go out of the house."

Harris Accused of Robbery.

It was reported at the Desplaines street police station Saturday night that Harris had entered the residence of Peter J. Black, 61 North Kedzie avenue, and taken $27 and some jewelry belonging to Black's wife. Black told the police he found Harris in the house, but Harris escaped. Warrants were issued for Harris' arrest and detectives were searching for him when they learned he had been arrested for killing Brand. This, the police assert, will be testified to in court by Black.

JAILER WHITMAN SUGGESTED FOR KEEPER OF BRIDEWELL.

Friends of Mayor Dunne Say He Wants Just Such a Man at Head of That Institution.

The story yesterday was that John L. Whitman, Cook county's jailer, is to be made superintendent of the bridewell in place of John J. Sloan, who has resigned. Mayor Dunne would not talk about it, but it is known that his closest friends have been advising the appointment for some time.

Besides giving the incumbent more salary and much better accommodations for his family than the jail affords, the place would give Mr. Whitman a larger opportunity for his reform work, the prisoners confined there being, as a rule, in the initiatory stages of crime and better subjects for missionary effort.

"It is the desire of the mayor to get a man at the bridewell who is not only capable of handling the institution successfully from a business point of view but who can also make it a reformatory instead of a mere prison," said one of the mayor's friends. Then he continued:

"At the time Sheriff Barrett was elected and there was talk of his removing Mr. Whitman from the care of the jail to make room for a democrat all the judges of the Circuit and Superior courts."

WIRELESS SYSTEM TO PHONE.

Seventeen Year Old Boy Gives Successful Tests and Hopes to Secure Patent.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 9.—[Special.]—Francis J. McCarty, a 17 year old San Francisco boy, seems to have demonstrated the application of wireless telegraphy to the telephone. Today at Ocean Beach, on home made instruments, he was able to carry the words of a song for one mile so they were heard distinctly at the other end of his circuit. For several months the boy has been working at his invention, on which he hopes to get a patent. His apparatus is a secret. In the basement of the Cliff house in front of his apparatus he sang a half dozen songs and newspaper men and others at his receiving station a full mile away heard the words as distinctly as if they came over an ordinary telephone wire.

WANT BATH; HIRE FAST TRAIN.

Two Men Make Record Trip from Philadelphia to Atlantic City for Midnight Dip.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 8.—[Special.]—Desiring at midnight to take a surf bath, Henry Pratt Janes and James M. Thompson of Baltimore, early engaged a special train on the Pennsylvania railroad and made a record trip to Atlantic City, seventy-six miles in sixty-eight minutes. They had arrived in Philadelphia at midnight after a trip from New York by automobile.

"I feel like taking a bath in the surf," exclaimed Janes. He was told there was no train until daybreak, and shouted: "Order me a locomotive. Make it a big one."

The special was provided at a cost of $450.

OBITUARY.

ALBERT M. EDDY, Chicago, for fifty-four years secretary and treasurer of the R. M. Eddy Foundry company, died of heart disease yesterday at his house, 478 West Congress street. He is survived by a widow and one child. He was a member of Kilwinning lodge, St. Bernard commandery, Oriental consistory, and Medinah temple. The funeral will be held Wednesday at Medinah temple, Walton place and Dearborn avenue. Interment will be at Rosehill.

MRS. HOYT PETTEE, 95 years old, who died on Sept. 1, was buried yesterday afternoon in Arlington cemetery. The funeral was held at the home of her son, William H. Pettee, 2589 Gladys avenue, with whom she had lived for fifteen years. The Rev. A. M. Bailey officiated. Mrs. Pettee was born in New Hampshire, but came to Illinois fifty-five years ago. She is survived by a son and four daughters.

ROBBERS SHOOT AND STAB

FOUR PERSONS ARE VICTIMS OF THUGS IN CHICAGO.

Henry Tietz, a Drug Clerk, Resists Burglars and Receives Two Bullets—Joseph R. Kirsch and His Wife Wounded by Men Who Try to Break Into Their Saloon—Joseph Atkins Cut While Attempting to Stop Two Girl Shoplifters.

While resisting robbers in various parts of the city early yesterday morning three persons were shot. A fourth was stabbed a few hours earlier. Burglars and holdup men were active in all districts of Chicago.

Henry Tietz, 27 years old, employed in the drug store of John Dietz & Bros., 3901 Wentworth avenue, was sleeping in the rear of the establishment. He was awakened by the rattling of bottles in the store, which two men were searching.

The clerk, who was unarmed, grappled with one robber. The other placed his revolver against Tietz's body and fired, the bullet entering his left shoulder. He released the burglar, who disappeared in the dark, and went to the telephone to call a physician. While he was at the instrument he was shot a second time in the shoulder. The robbers then escaped. Tietz was removed to the Lakeside hospital.

Crime at South Chicago.

Although ten new policemen were sent by Chief Collins on Tuesday to South Chicago to aid the fifty-five regular men in checking crime in that district, many robberies and attempted holdups were reported during Saturday night. The most serious affair was the attempt of three men to enter the saloon of Joseph R. Kisch, 8550 Green Bay avenue. Mr. and Mrs. Kisch, who live in the rear of the saloon, were awakened by the smashing of a window and a door. Mr. Kisch seized a rifle and his wife a revolver, and the men were driven away, but not before Mr. Kisch had received a wound in his left cheek and his wife had been shot in the abdomen. The wounded couple were attended by Dr. H. Dern, 9121 Commercial avenue, and probably will recover.

Earlier in the night Patrick Kenney, 238 Ninety-first street, was held up at Ninety-first street and Exchange avenue and robbed of $240. Other burglaries were reported by Paul Delsca, 8526 Mackinaw avenue; Michael Stineas, 8559 Superior street; William P. Kinney, saloon, 9245 Commercial avenue; and John Snyder, 9128 Houston avenue.

Cut by Girl Shoplifter.

Joseph Atkins was cut severely by two girls when he attempted to prevent them from taking a skirt from the store of Atkins & Freund, Forty-eighth street and Ashland avenue. Joseph Ducak, a clerk, also was injured. One woman, who gave her name as Nora Bates, was arrested.

The women asked to be shown some skirts. One "tried on" a garment, and then both started for the door. The one wearing the skirt reached the door, after Atkins and the clerk had been cut while trying to stop her. She escaped in a carriage which a man had waiting.

It cost Edwin Strain, an Indiana farmer, $40 to "see the town." He probably will get his money back, however, as the man who "showed" him was arrested by the stockyards police.

The safe of the Austin Laundry company, Lake street and Fifty-first court, was broken open by burglars, who used nitroglycerin. The door of the safe was demolished, and a glass partition which separated the office from the laundry was shattered by the blast. No money was secured.

While walking in the morning at Wabash avenue and Congress street Mrs. Julia Carter, 536 Thirteenth street, Milwaukee, was robbed of a watch and chain, valued at $40.

Police Make Nineteen Arrests.

Nineteen arrests were made by members of Chief Collins' crime squads during the night. The most important were those of Anthony Washiska and Kasmir Matenik, who were arrested a short time after they are said to have robbed and beaten Alexander Wotjzna, 562 Dixon street.

The attack on Wotjzna was made at Division and Noble streets, soon after midnight. Matenik was captured at once. Washiska was arrested later at his house, 567 Noble street.

Leo Prindiville, said by the police to be an expert burglar; Albert Wallace, and Harry McKay also were arrested.

HATPIN IS WOMAN'S WEAPON.

Thomas C. Wyckoff Injured in Early Morning Fight in West Madison Street.

Resenting the attentions of Thomas C. Wyckoff, 780 Jackson boulevard, Miss Tillie Johnson, it is said, stabbed him with a hatpin early yesterday morning.

Miss Johnson was walking with George H. Lewis. While in front of 621 Madison street Wyckoff, who has known her for some time, met the couple and told Lewis to leave. He refused and Wyckoff and Lewis began fighting. Miss Johnson took Lewis' part and attacked Wyckoff, stabbing him, it is said, three times in the face.

All three were arrested. Wyckoff's wounds were dressed at the county hospital.

PLANNING FOR NEW MAYOR

DEMOCRATS BEGIN EARLY TO DISCUSS AVAILABLE MEN.

Party Divided in Three Factions, Which Respectively Favor Dunne, Harrison, and Some Other Candidate—Prospect of Four Year Term for Next Incumbent Lends Interest to the Situation—Radicals Want Darrow Nominated for the Office.

Badly mixed up as democratic local politics is now, the democratic managers are mixing it up more by starting in to figure on the result of the next mayoral convention. So far it has been nothing more than figuring, as the issues of today are hardly likely to be those of a year from now, but already there has been a casting about for possible alliances and tentative propositions looking toward possible combinations.

The next mayorship is going to be a prize worth fighting for. If the charter amendment passed by the last legislature is ratified by the people next fall—and it is generally taken for granted it will be—the mayor's term will be four years.

That Mayor Dunne wants to succeed himself is known. He will have to if he is going to give municipal ownership to Chicago. His present plans for a municipal street railway, under his "contract" arrangement, do not contemplate installing it until some months after his present term has expired.

Rewards for Loyalty Demanded.

But many of the democratic managers do not really care as much for municipal ownership as their public utterances would indicate. The personality of the mayor and what he is willing to do for them are of a great deal more importance in their eyes. Up to date Mayor Dunne has not made himself especially popular with these people and most of them can bring delegates into a convention.

The executive committee of the Municipal Ownership league is debating the mayor's "contract plan," and members give it out to the newspaper reporters they are afraid this granting of a franchise to a private corporation is not municipal ownership "now," which was promised them by Judge Dunne when he was running for mayor. Some persons say the faultfinding of the members of the league is due to the fact that few of them have been appointed to office.

Three Factions in Party.

So far as the democratic organization is now divided there are three factions to it. There are the ward leaders who formerly belonged to the Harrison faction but who have been recognized by Mayor Dunne since his inauguration and have naturally transferred their allegiance to the present mayor. As long as this recognition continues they will stick by Judge Dunne.

This, however, does not cover many wards. There is the Third, in part the Fourth and Fifth, the Eighth, the Twentieth, the Twenty-second, the Thirty-first, the Thirty-second, the Thirty-fourth, and Thirty-fifth, and that is about all. In most of the other wards the friends of the mayor have started fights against the present committeemen. To stop these fights would interfere with the plans of the adherents of William Randolph Hearst, and Mr. Hearst is supporting the mayor for renomination. His friends, however, say they can bring in the delegates from these contested wards.

Then there are the ward leaders who are backing Carter H. Harrison for renomination. Ex-City Clerk William Loeffler is the most prominent of these by virtue of the fact he can control the most delegates. He is still in control of the Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth wards, the Seventh Congressional district. He says the ex-mayor could be again elected if he were nominated. John Brennan of the Eighteenth ward is still a Harrison man also, but his health is such he can never take part in another campaign.

New Man for Mayor Is Urged.

The third set includes the ward leaders who were with Mr. Harrison as long as he was in yor because it was useless to oppose him, but who would hardly consent to nominate him again, especially for a four year term. Roger Sullivan, the democratic committeeman, and Ald. John Powers of the Nineteenth ward are the most notable examples of this faction. They would prefer to make terms with Mayor Dunne.

This faction is looking around for some third man who could be put forward as a "compromise candidate." At present the names most spoken of in this connection are those of George A. Trude and ex-Judge John Barton Payne. The list will grow, however, long before the primaries are had and an attempt will be made to throw aside both the mayor and the ex-mayor and select some third man.

The threat of the radicals, however, is that if this is done some independent candidate, Clarence S. Darrow, for instance, will be put in the field. Mr. Darrow has long wanted to be mayor of Chicago.

TRAINS CRASH; NONE IS HURT.

Escape from Injury of Passengers in Wreck at Jerseyville, Ill., Is Considered Miraculous.

Jerseyville, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The escape of passengers and train crew when two trains collided here today is considered miraculous. Alton train No. 20, north bound, and Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis No. 3, south bound, met on a crossing. Both engines were demolished, but none of the passengers was hurt.

TURN TABLES IN LABOR 'HARMONY.'

President Dold Unexpectedly Seated in Spite of Madden's Protests.

POLITICS IN THE MOVE.

Winners Have Ambitions and Pet Schemes for Gaining City Offices.

"Harmony" of an unexpected sort was achieved by the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday. The dove of peace turned a somersault. It then alighted, but it signalized the victory of President Charles Dold, not of "Skinny" Madden.

President Dold gaveled through the indorsement of his own reelection Aug. 13 at the meeting in Bricklayers' hall. Madden and his crowd, who broke up the election of July 16, and declared that of Aug. 13 nullified in the meeting two weeks ago, went down in defeat.

This coup of the Dold forces grew out of the session of Saturday night in the offices of William B. Lloyd in the Unity building. The Madden men were "caught napping." By some oversight on the part of their leader they were trusting in the "harmony" program which was mapped out in the Musicians' hall meeting, and their delegates were not present.

The entire question came to a head in the early part of the meeting when the report of the judges and clerks of election was called for. All attempts to have this tabled were gaveled down by Dold, who appeared to have acquired a new fighting spirit during his brief absence from the city.

An appeal from the decision of the chair resulted in an overwhelming showing of Dold delegates. For five minutes the hall was in the wildest uproar, but the Madden men proved "good losers" and quiet soon settled down. While an appeal may be taken to the American Federation of Labor, it is the opinion of leaders that the fight will not be revived until Jan. 1.

Political Scheme Revealed.

Behind all this fight for the prestige of the control of the federation is a deep political plot. It came to light as a result of the meeting of Dold, T. P. Quinn, John Fitzpatrick, Daniel L. Cruice, Secretary Edward Nockels, and a few others in Lloyd's office.

Quinn, it developed, hungers for a position in the city administration for his services on the Municipal Ownership league. Nockels long has wanted a job on the board of public improvements, and Dold is ambitious to run as an independent labor candidate in the next municipal campaign. To gain all this it was necessary to have at least the show of controlling the central labor body.

Having this, it is the plan to force Mayor Dunne to give to the labor people the jobs which they say he promised them. Quinn for some time has been denouncing the mayor for not giving the place of corporation counsel to Cruice. This, it is understood, was opposed by Clarence Darrow. The plot against Dunne has gone so far that rumors are current of a large sum offered to place him on the "unfair" list with union labor.

Hurried Caucuses Held.

Some intimation of these things could be seen in the hurried caucuses which were held between the rival forces just before the meeting. Madden and Frank Thoman, one of his lieutenants, buttonholed Dold on the platform, where the president sat in firm possession of his chair and gavel long before the meeting opened.

Madden had not learned of the scheme to bolt the "harmony" program and railroad the election through until nearly noon. He had no time to gather his men. He attempted to compromise with Dold. Dold shook his head unmoved.

At 2:15 p. m. the meeting was called to order. Several "plain clothes" men were observed in the hall. The roll call of the officers elected on Aug. 13 was read. It was hardly finished when Delegate Phil Hogan, a Madden man, sprang to his feet and shouted for recognition. He was ordered to his seat.

"We will hear the minutes of the last meeting," called the president. This was the meeting that nullified the election of Dold. On the recognition of its constitutionality depended the defeat of Dold. Hogan again failed to gain the floor.

In spite of the angry protests of the Madden men, the reading of the minutes was suspended. Madden appealed, but was voted down by the house.

The report of the judges of the election was called for by Dold. It was read, with Dold at the head of the ticket.

"I declare these officers elected for the ensuing term," said Dold, calmly ignoring the wild gesticulations of Hogan, who was trying to get the floor. Madden, Hogan, and Jaxon appealed and were beaten.

Some Business Transacted.

When order had been restored a resolution was adopted "condemning the unbusinesslike methods of the city officials handling convict labor products."

John C. Harding, secretary and organizer for the Typographical union No. 16, made a report of the strike in progress against the Chicago Typothetæ. He did not ask for funds, but for sympathy.

"The strike will not spread and we can take care of the situation," he said.

The report of the Labor day committee was heard and Delegate Kennedy from the musicians' union said that there would be no trouble with the bands on the line of march.

Comes to Disrupt Teamsters.

Thomas Nelson, formerly president of the Baggage and Parcel Delivery Drivers' union, returned to Chicago with the avowed purpose of heading the secession movement in the teamsters' union. He proposes to revive the old Teamsters' National union, which existed before the two drivers' organizations were merged into the international brotherhood. He says that he will apply to the secretary of the state of Illinois tomorrow for a charter, and that he expects to recruit immediately a membership of 10,000.

Hunter Shot by Own Gun.

While hunting near Hammond, along the Calumet river, yesterday, William Wittmer was seriously wounded by the accidental discharge of his shotgun. Wittmer fell into the water from the boat, which he was rowing, and his two companions narrowly escaped drowning in attempting to rescue him. The wound probably will prove fatal.

ROOSEVELT GETS MIKADO'S THANKS

President Warmly Greeted Because of Efforts in Behalf of Peace.

JAPAN GRATEFUL FOR ACT

Cordial Message Puts End to Rumors That Terms Are Not Satisfactory.

Oyster Bay, N. Y., Sept. 3.—President Roosevelt received at 12:40 p. m. today from the emperor of Japan warm thanks for his "disinterested and unremitting efforts in the interests of peace and humanity," and an expression of the Japanese emperor's "grateful appreciation of the distinguished part" the president has taken in the establishment of peace in the far east.

The cablegram, which was received from the emperor personally, follows:

TOKIO, Sept. 3.—The President: I have received with gratification your message of congratulations, conveyed through our plenipotentiaries, and thank you warmly for it. To your disinterested and unremitting efforts in the interest of peace and humanity I attach the high value which is their due, and assure you of my grateful appreciation of the distinguished part you have taken in the establishment of peace, based upon principles essential to the permanent welfare and tranquillity of the far east. MUTSUHITO.

The cablegram from the Japanese emperor puts an end to the rumors that the emperor was dissatisfied with the terms finally concluded by his plenipotentiaries with those of the emperor of Russia. He accords President Roosevelt full credit for the part he took in bringing about peace upon principles essential to the permanent welfare and tranquillity of the far east."

Belief in Permanent Peace.

The concluding sentence of the cablegram is especially significant. It evidently voices the belief of the Japanese emperor that the treaty about to be concluded at Portsmouth will be for a permanent peace.

It can be said that the president has expressed no anxiety at the delay of the cablegram from the emperor of Japan. It was known here that the terms finally concluded at Portsmouth were dictated by the Japanese emperor himself and that they could not be otherwise than satisfactory to him and his advisers. The delay in responding to the Japanese plenipotentiaries was due, it is surmised, to the desire of the emperor to be assured that the terms agreed upon would be incorporated into a treaty, without the probability of a serious hitch. That assurance, it is said, was conveyed to the Japanese emperor last night upon the practical conclusion of the draft of the treaty. The cablegram to President Roosevelt today followed in natural course.

Pastor Praises Roosevelt.

New York, Sept. 3.—The Rev. Donald Sage Mackay, pastor of the Fifth Avenue Collegiate church, in his sermon today paid a tribute to President Roosevelt, who for thirty years has been a member of this Dutch Reformed congregation. Dr. Mackay said:

"Inasmuch as our president, Theodore Roosevelt, made profession of his faith in this church thirty years ago and has been ever since a loyal member, it seems only fitting that here this morning we record our profound appreciation of the signal service which he has rendered to the whole civilized world by his masterful and unwearied efforts in securing peace between Russia and Japan.

"Not only in the magnificent work consummated last week has President Roosevelt added enduring luster to his own name, but he also has given a new influence to America as the arbiter of peace in the councils of the nations. More and more will other powers look to this country for the peaceful adjustment of international difficulties in the light of what our president has accomplished in ending this bloody and disastrous war. We rejoice with Russia and Japan in concluding a peace which will mean something better and more permanent than cessation from bloodshed.

"The president's splendid service will be but half accomplished if it is not recognized by all the great powers as a means of bringing about an alliance that will safeguard the interests of peace and Christian civilization in the far east for many years."

A special thanksgiving prayer set forth by Bishop H. C. Potter of New York in commemoration of the peace of Portsmouth was read at Grace Protestant Episcopal church.

The Commercial Cable company is advised by Hongkong that for the present the Formosa cable is closed to all but government traffic.

KAISER PRAISES ROOSEVELT

Emperor William Tells American Congressman That to President Alone Belongs Credit for Peace.

BERLIN, Sept. 3.—United States Congressman William Alden Smith of Michigan was one of Emperor William's guests at dinner Saturday night. Emperor William alluded to the peace conference at Portsmouth, saying: "President Roosevelt alone deserves credit for bringing about peace. He was the only man in the world who could have done it. He did his part splendidly."

WILLIAM REDMOND DISLIKES ENGLAND'S PACT WITH JAPAN.

William Redmond, M. P., brother of John Redmond, the Irish nationalist leader, arrived in Chicago yesterday with his wife, homeward bound on a trip around the world. He will be the guest of the Irish Fellowship club at a dinner at the Sherman house Thursday night.

Mr. Redmond left Ireland last December, and proceeded, with a few stops in Europe and a visit in Ceylon, to Australia, where he remained with relatives for more than six months. He will speak in Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Boston, and sail for England in about three weeks.

"I can see nothing but disgrace in the alliance between England and Japan," said Mr. Redmond in the course of a conversation on the Russo-Japanese war. "England will yet repent having allied herself with a nation that is neither of her own race nor of her own religion to make war on a nation that, the least you can say, is of the white race and professes the Christian religion.

"If it is necessary to seek the aid of Japan in order to hold India it would be better to let India go. The 'yellow peril' will yet be felt by the western world, and then England will repent her share of the responsibility. Australia is already beginning to feel the Japanese invasion, and you in this country will also in time, I believe."

Mr. Redmond said the Irish national parliamentary party, of which his brother is leader, is stronger than ever.

UPHEAVAL ON MOUNTAIN SIDE.

Residents of Mexican Villages in a Panic, Fearing Volcano Will Appear.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—A great upheaval on the mountain side has startled the residents of Guerrero, Mexico, and driven the people from surrounding villages. Great bodies of rock have been thrown up on the mountain side and rolled into the valleys. This is accompanied by earthquakes and subterranean rumblings. This has been in progress for two weeks. The stones thrown out are hot, and the natives fear a volcano will appear. Already much valuable land has been ruined by the upheaval.

WITTE'S BUBBLE PRICKED.

CZAR, NOT ENVOY, WON VICTORY IN CONCLUSION OF PEACE.

Plenipotentiary Held Out for Conceding to Japanese Demand for Indemnity, and the Fact That Emperor's Own Proposals Prevailed Marked His Utter Defeat—Autocrat Now Is Sorry That He Even Surrendered a Half of Sakhalin.

[From the St. Petersburg Correspondent of the London Times.]

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

ST. PETERSBURG, Sept. 4.—Information given to me bursts the bubble of reputation accorded to M. de Witte. The whole credit for Russia's diplomatic victory belongs exclusively to the czar. Indeed, M. de Witte did his best to prevent it, repeatedly urging the sovereign to give way on the question of money, in which he was supported strongly by Foreign Minister Lamsdorf.

The mysterious inspired messages in the Slovo, in which M. de Witte under this disguise gave vent to the gloomiest forebodings unless concessions were made, thus are accounted for. It is easy to understand M. de Witte's contradictory utterances to journalists, since some of them reflected the views of Peterhof and others his own.

Witte Unqualifiedly Failed.

It is easy also to understand why Count Lamsdorf sent no congratulatory telegram to M. de Witte. Far from being a victory for M. de Witte, the peace of Portsmouth marks the utter unqualified failure of his views.

M. de Witte and Count Lamsdorf would have preferred to pay an indemnity rather than to have ceded Sakhalin. In a word, both favored President Roosevelt's proposal for the repurchase of the island.

The czar, who likes nothing better than acting as his own foreign minister, took exactly the opposite view. It is intimated that he had strong motives in so doing, inasmuch as he was persuaded that the Japanese would not accept such terms and thereby the war would be resumed.

Might Have Saved Sakhalin.

Indeed, in court circles the whole thing was regarded as a foregone conclusion. The czar, on hearing that the Japanese, contrary to his expectations, had accepted the terms, bitterly reproached M. de Witte for the partition of Sakhalin, contending that if he had displayed diplomatic skill he might have induced the Japanese to renounce the whole island, since, contrary to M. de Witte's reports, they evidently were bent upon peace at any cost.

The loss of the southern half of Sakhalin rankles deep in the imperial breast.

Czar to Gen. Linevitch.

The emperor has telegraphed the following to Gen. Linevitch:

"The negotiations at Portsmouth led on Aug. 19 to a refusal of the demands of the Japanese government regarding the cession of the island of Sakhalin, the payment of a war indemnity, the surrender of our ships lying in neutral harbors, and the limitation of our forces in the waters of the Pacific ocean. After further negotiations Japan on Aug. 29 yielded all our conditions, but asked for the return of that portion of Sakhalin occupied by Japanese troops, which is the part held by Japan until 1875 and then ceded by treaty to Russia.

"The self-sacrificing army, so dear to me, withstood the assault of a numerically superior enemy in Manchuria step by step during nineteen months, obstinately repulsing his advance. Under your leadership the army was reorganized and strengthened by the arrival of troops from Russia, and it is now greater in numbers and stronger than before. It was prepared not only to ward off the enemy but also to inflict upon him an important defeat.

Heart Bleeds for War.

"I and all Russia believe in the strength of my glorious army and in its readiness to sacrifice itself for the good of the fatherland, but my duty to my conscience and to the people intrusted to me by God commands me not again to put to the test the valor of Russian men so dear to my heart and not to expose them to fresh and endless horrors of war in order to retain half of a remote island which Japan ceded to us in 1875, and I have therefore accepted the preliminary peace conditions.

"The Russian troops repeatedly have proved during this sanguinary conflict their valor and self-sacrifice.

"Convey this to my dear army. May it know that I and Russia value the sacrifices which it has made in this severe war."

The czar's telegram to Gen. Linevitch is interpreted here as a confirmation of the statement that he has received the news of the conclusion of peace with a heavy heart. It is reported that Gen. Linevitch will be appointed viceroy and at the same time retain the post of commander in chief of that portion of his troops which will remain in the far east. Such a decision would be regarded as ominous for the permanence of peace. The viceroyalty would be unmeaning if Russia seriously renounced her ambition of dominating the Pacific.

RUSS EMIGRANTS KEPT BACK TO PREVENT CHOLERA SPREAD

Hamburg Holds All Suspicious Arrivals from Czar's Empire to Protect United States from Plague.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1905: By the New York Herald.]

HAMBURG, Sept. 3.—All Russian immigrants arriving here for transshipment to the United States will not be allowed to depart until they shall have spent at least six days under close quarantine observation, to prevent the cholera from spreading to the United States from this port.

The steamer Moltke from this port to New York, with about eighty Russian emigrants, was stopped in the lower Elbe and the Russians debarked. These had traveled from Russia with a man who had died of the cholera.

On the Pretoria, which sailed from here, were German, Italian, and Hungarian emigrants, but all of the 414 are healthy.

There are no fresh cases of the plague here, the last being reported Saturday, but it was mild and physicians say the man will recover in a few days. He is isolated.

Dr. Nocht, harbor physician for the government at Hamburg, in reply to inquiries concerning cholera, said today:

"The transshipment of Russian emigrants having been suspended here, further cholera infection is improbable. The room companion of the first case has a light attack, but otherwise all are healthy.

"These emigrants due to sail Thursday on the steamer Moltke (for New York) were landed, and since then have been under medical observation. All are healthy. The drinking water and the sanitary arrangements here are faultless.

"Single instances, in spite of the greatest care, cannot be prevented, but danger exists for sea traffic. I am convinced that all the means for opposing the cholera are in use. We hold that Americans have no grounds for disquietude."

The opinion is expressed in Berlin that the United States seaboard has more to fear from emigrants shipping at Triest than from German ports, as cholera is already in Austrian Poland. Triest is on the Adriatic sea.

RESERVISTS AT LIBAU KILL TEN; INJURE FIFTY INNOCENTS.

Soldiers Answer Random Shots of Socialists by Charging Crowds on the Street—Women Among Victims—3,000 Mutinous Sailors Forced to Join Army—Moscow Police Arrest Zemstvoists, Including Three Russian Princes.

LIBAU, Sept. 3.—The departure of reservists Saturday night was marked by socialistic rioting in which ten persons were killed and fifty wounded. There were many innocent victims, women being included among them.

The agitators fired from a house upon the military, who replied with a volley. The cavalry then charged, using their sabers on the crowd. A detachment of troops stormed the house from which the shots were fired.

Twenty-one wounded persons were taken to the hospital.

The reservists did not anticipate that rioting would occur. They had just been entertained by the city and were accompanied by their wives and children.

Mutineers Forced Into Army.

Between 2,000 and 3,000 sailors of the Black sea fleets who were implicated in the recent disorders have been subjected to compulsory enrollment in the army. This is the final liquidation of the mutinies which went a great way towards explaining the Russian naval disaster in the sea of Japan.

Private reports concerning the military court martials here accentuate previous information in regard to the lack of discipline among the Black sea and Baltic sailors, and the monumental incapacity of their officers. It was found that petty officers were wholly ignorant of elementary seamanship and their duties generally.

Admiral Birilieff determined to set about cleaning the Augean stables. It is expected that all officers from admirals downward will disappear like autumn leaves.

Three Princes Arrested.

MOSCOW, Sept. 3.—The police tonight entered a private house and stopped a meeting of members of the Moscow zemstvo congress, which had been called to discuss the attitude the zemstvoists should take toward the projected national assembly. Among those at the meeting were Prince Dolgorouki, Prince Troubetskoy, and Prince Ivoff.

These three princes are marshals of the nobility. They were delegates from the all-Russian zemstvo congress which in June last presented an address to Emperor Nicholas calling for reforms, to which the czar cordially replied.

DOWIE PREDICTS CZAR'S DOOM.

Says Russian People Will Revolt and Secure Their Right When the Soldiers Return Home.

In his address at Zion City yesterday Dr. Dowie was emphatic in his praise for Japan. He said a nation which deliberately massacres its people ceases to be a civilized country, and cannot tell other nations to keep their hands off because it is a private affair.

Dowie does not regard peace in a hopeful light. Russia, he thinks, will try to hold off signing the treaty as long as possible, in order to save the party now in control, for as soon as the soldiers return, he said, the people will rise in revolution in the interior and secure their rights.

He predicted the time is coming when, if America and the European powers continue to insult and humiliate the Chinese, they will rise up 500,000,000 strong, and perhaps will win.

MARSHALL FIELD MEETS FIANCEE, JUST FROM PARIS.

At Dinner It Is Decided Misses Birch and Eddy Will Be Bridemaids and Spencer Eddy Best Man at Marriage on Tuesday—Covers for Wedding Breakfast After Ceremony Will Be Laid at Claridge's Hotel for Twenty-five Guests.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Sept. 3.—Mrs. Delia Spencer Caton, who on Tuesday will be married at St. Margaret's church, Westminster, to Marshall Field of Chicago, arrived at Claridge's hotel from Paris today. She was accompanied by Mrs. Augustus Eddy. Mr. Field met them at the railway station and entertained them at dinner.

Then it was tentatively decided that the Misses Birch and Eddy would act as bridemaids at the wedding, and Spencer Eddy, secretary of the American embassy at St. Petersburg, as best man. After the ceremony, the wedding breakfast, at which twenty-five covers will be laid, will be given at Claridge's hotel.

The guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Eddy, Spencer Eddy, Miss Eddy, Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Field Jr., and their daughter, Miss Birch, Mr. and Mrs. Crossley, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dibblee, Mr. and Mrs. J. ARMIES TO TARRY FOR 18 MONTHS.

the merchants of those countries will have an advantage due to the prestige of their military forces, which will be of immense importance.

During the final examination of the treaty today, it was decided to divide the article relating to the evacuation of Manchuria into two—one describing the plan of withdrawal and the second the retrocession of the province to China. The open door article regarding Manchuria stands unchanged.

There will be two articles, also, concerning Sakhalin—the first detailing the method whereby Russia cedes the southern half to the Japanese, and the second providing for the neutralization of the island and forbidding the erection of fortifications.

Much Red Tape in Prospect.

The exchange of ratifications will be quite a ceremony. Copies of the treaty retained by the missions will be laid before the emperors, who will approve formally. Notification then will be given by Japan to the French minister at Tokio, who has been looking after Russian interests in the Japanese islands, and by Russia to the American ambassador at St. Petersburg, who has been performing a like duty in the Slav empire. The two nations will appoint ministers without delay, and diplomatic relations will be resumed.

After the ratification of the treaty Japan will enter into negotiations with China for confirmation of the lease of the southern part of the province of Liaotung. It is expected that she will seek to have abrogated the treaty of Nov. 20, 1895, made as a result of pressure by Russia, Germany, and France, by which she retroceded to China "in perpetuity and full sovereignty the southern part of the province of Fengtien" (Liaotung).

Russia will have to renounce the special agreements made with China in connection with Manchuria and those conventions and agreements which she had with Corea before the war. Immediately afterwards the Japanese caused Corea to renounce all such arrangements, and Count Lamsdorf deemed it advisable to issue from St. Petersburg a statement that the renunciation would not be recognized by the czar.

One of the most important of these agreements was that entered into in 1899, whereby Russia secured sites on three harbors at strategic points which she hoped some day to utilize as naval stations. They were obtained ostensibly for use by Russian whalers.

Komura Won't Stop Here.

Mr. Sato said tonight that he feared it would be impossible for Baron Komura to stop in Chicago, though there still is a chance that he will stay a few hours if it could be arranged.

"We received an invitation to the University of Chicago," he said, "and we would be glad to accept it if we could."

M. de Witte proposes to signalize the signature of the treaty by attending mass, which will be celebrated in orthodox Greek style on Tuesday morning at the church in Portsmouth. The archbishop of the Greek church at New York has been requested to come here for that purpose. This act is quite in accordance with Russian custom. It will be remembered that before leaving New York to go to Oyster Bay and meet the Japanese envoys M. de Witte attended mass at the Russian church in New York.

DE WITTE QUICK; KOMURA SLOW.

Peace Envoys in Conference Work Have Methods Wholly Dissimilar, Each, at Times, Advantageous.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 3.—In the sittings of the peace conference Baron Komura always stated the Japanese position upon a given point briefly, but with great care, and when M. de Witte, whose method was entirely different, would try to draw out explanations he would stick doggedly to the statement he had made.

M. de Witte, a man of affairs, resourceful and talented as he is admitted to be, had his case in his head. He never took papers with him. He met everything which came up in an offhand way, weighing it instantly, analyzing it, arguing the logic pro and con, and stating his views quite bluntly, never asking for time to consider.

Baron Komura, on the other hand, could with the greatest difficulty be induced to enter into the region of argument. He stuck to the brief before him, speaking always quite slowly. He would repeat, over and over again, what he had stated, as if he had learned his lesson by rote. Several times M. de Witte would say:

"Yes, I understand perfectly what you say, but what do you mean; what is your real object?"

Then Baron Komura would go back and restate his proposition almost exactly as he had done originally. Both systems had their advantages. By insisting, insisting, insisting, Baron Komura would sometimes catch M. de Witte off his guard and provoke him into statements which were always eagerly seized upon. As a final resort Baron Komura was always ready with a written solution of a question, and would produce it suddenly, saying:

"This is what we propose; what have you to offer?"

Then the value of preparation and foresightedness was apparent. M. de Witte seldom had a crystallized counter proposition to make. But on the other hand, whenever M. de Witte succeeded in leading his adversary into the realm of argument, where previous preparation availed nothing, he had Baron Komura at a disadvantage.

One of those present compared Baron Komura to a horse in blinders. As long as he was on the beaten road, with his work ahead of him, he went along finely, but the instant he was off the road into the woods, with the blinders removed, he appeared to be confused and lost, and hastened back as speedily as possible to the road which he had mentally traversed so often and with every foot of which he was familiar.

SNAKE WORSHIP CAUSES REVOLT.

Negroes in German East Africa Return to Old Faith and Start Insurrection.

ENTIRE COUNTRY AFLAME

European Settlement Wiped Out—Only a Handful of Troops to Oppose Rebels.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Sept. 4.—A widespread rebellion is fermenting in German East Africa as the result of the revival of the ancient heathen worship of snakes. Native sorcerers who see their power disappearing are propagating the doctrine that the negroes can liberate themselves from German rule by returning to their old belief.

The natives are being taught if they will worship snakes again they will need to pay no more taxes, to construct no more roads, and to perform no more labor on the cotton plantations.

The sorcerers have persuaded them that the snake gods will drive the foreigners into the ocean and cause their weapons to shoot water instead of fire.

European Settlement Wiped Out.

The situation suddenly has become extremely critical. All the Europeans in the vicinity of the Rucha river have been massacred by the insurgents, but the exact number of victims has not been ascertained definitely. Nahenge, where are several dozen German residents, is surrounded by rebels.

Commercial caravans have been attacked between Kilosa and Nahenge on the great trade route which leads from Dar-Es-Salaam to the region of the great lakes. The rebellion has spread to districts and populations which hitherto have been regarded as perfectly loyal and has assumed formidable dimensions.

The rebels attacked three Roman Catholic mission stations—Lukuledi, Nyangew, and Masasi, maintained by Benedictine monks. All the missionaries, together with the European residents, were rescued with the exception of one Catholic nun, Sister Valburga.

Troops Can't Handle Situation.

Count Goetzen has taken prompt measures for dispatching reinforcements, but the task of restoring order cannot possibly be performed by the troops at his disposal, which consist of some 1,500 natives commanded by ninety-four German officers and 100 German noncommissioned officers supplemented by 600 native police commanded by four European officers.

The extension of the rebellion over a large area renders it impracticable that this handful of troops adequately should protect European settlements and at the same time take effective and aggressive measures against the insurgents. It therefore will be necessary to dispatch reinforcements from Germany, and when the reichstag reassembles in a few weeks the government will be obliged to ask for a grant for the necessary military action.

Loyal Chieftain Victorious.

Native Chieftain Hassan Duka, who has remained loyal to Germany, attacked the rebel leader, Wagindo Kiswere, near the coast. A stiff engagement took place. Finally Wagindo was put to flight. The small German cruiser Bussard has arrived at Lindi. It will land sailors to assist in the protection of the European residents in the southern districts of the colony.

Gov. Goetzen made the following statement:

"The troops at my disposal, numbering 1,800, are insufficient for this immense territory with 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 of inhabitants, especially as there are no railways. All movements are necessarily slow. The rebels are armed with muzzle loading rifles and poisoned arrows, together with a few breech loading rifles plundered from murdered Europeans."

FRENCH JEW SLAIN AT TANGIER

Tribe of Angeras Seeks to Force Bandit Raisuli to Meet It in Battle.

TANGIER, Sept. 3.—A French Jew was found murdered here Saturday night. The murderers escaped.

The powerful tribe of Angeras is seeking to force the brigand Raisuli to meet it in open battle, relying on their superiority in numbers to win.

The Angeras raided three villages under Raisuli's authority near Tangier, driving off large herds of cattle and sheep, a portion of which was the property of Europeans. Raisuli collected a band of his followers and started in pursuit, and in several skirmishes that ensued several men on both sides were killed or wounded.

The suburbs of Tangier have been deserted by Europeans. The Angeras are seeking to capture Europeans and hold them for ransom. The Moroccan authorities are powerless, as they fear Raisuli and the Angeras.

INDEPENDENCE OF BELGIUM IS CELEBRATED IN CHICAGO.

Seventy-fifth Anniversary of Country's Freedom Occasion of Festivities—Address by Charles Henrotin.

With speeches, national music, and singing, the seventy-fifth anniversary of the independence of Belgium was celebrated yesterday at Ogden's grove. Nearly 2,000 persons attended the festivities and the grove was decorated with the black, yellow, and red tricolor of Belgium and with flags of all nations.

Belgium popular games, dancing, and music continued throughout the day. In the evening a reception was held in honor of Charles Henrotin, consul for Belgium in Chicago, Rene Jencour, assistant to the French consul, and S. Shimizu, consul for Japan, all of whom made short speeches. Dr. C. Vermeren made the address of welcome.

Following the speaking "Belgenland" was sung by three little girls dressed in white, joined by the audience.

Notoriety Following Publication of Orinoco Letters Too Odoriferous.

Mr. Loomis went as minister to Portugal and was brought back from there by Secretary Hay himself, because, as it was said, he believed Mr. Loomis had the nerve and the cold blooded ability to clean out a lot of barnacles in the state department, and also in the consular service.

Mr. Loomis did do that work well, and for it received the personal thanks of the president.

However, it is well understood now that the president considers Mr. Loomis to have reached the limits of his usefulness in any diplomatic capacity or in the state department, and the publication of the new series of letters, although they do not establish any new charge, it is believed, will make his retirement from the public service certain.

FALL DUE TO FINANCIAL WAR.

Inside History of Orinoco Company Shows That It Backed Loomis for Venezuela Appointment.

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Close on the announcement of his coming retirement from the post of assistant secretary of state, Francis B. Loomis again is dragged into the limelight of notoriety by disclosures of the inner workings of the Orinoco company, limited, through whose good offices he owes the credit for his appointment as minister to Venezuela in 1897.

A dispute between the stockholders of the Orinoco company has brought this alleged fester to a head. That the public will be regaled by the inside facts that will be aired in the courts is unquestioned.

One interesting feature of the controversy is the making public of the names of the men behind the organization which has secured such big favors in the Orinoco country.

Looked Out for Venezuela Jobs.

While the campaign to secure the post for Mr. Loomis was under way, correspondence of much import was exchanged between James A. Radcliffe of Brooklyn, Charles L. Kurtz, then chairman of the Ohio state republican executive committee, and Mr. Loomis.

This discloses, by inference at least, that among Mr. Loomis' "pushers" an understanding existed as to the exploitation of Venezuelan concessions. One reason for the activity of Mr. Radcliffe and Mr. Kurtz, with others, on behalf of Mr. Loomis was their interest in Venezuelan "jobs," existent and prospective. They desired an American minister at Caracas who would be friendly.

After Mr. Loomis' appointment to the Venezuelan mission the exploitation of the Venezuelan projects shaped themselves under the direction of Ohioans. Mr. Loomis made a trip up the Orinoco river in a gunboat, sailing for 125 miles alongside property which had been granted by Venezuela to Mr. Fitzgerald, the original Manoa concessionnaire, and constituting possessions claimed by the Orinoco company, limited.

Undertook Refunding of Debt.

Thereafter Ohio men became interested in the Orinoco company. The new company was formed under the laws of West Virginia and named the Orinoco corporation. The head offices were transferred from Fairbault, Minn., to Cincinnati.

According to evidence elicited at the Bowen-Loomis inquiry, a friend or two of Mr. Loomis', including his chief witness on that occasion, Rudolph Dolge, United States consular agent at Caracas, became associated with the undertaking.

Then, also, the project of refunding the Venezuelan debt, which was, according to Mr. Radcliffe, an undertaking which he explained fully to Mr. Loomis before the latter sailed to install himself in the American legation at Caracas, was taken up by Ohio interests, headed by Charles R. Meyer of Columbus.

A contract was entered into, it is alleged, between Mr. Loomis and Mr. Meyer, in connection with the debt refunding scheme, by which the American minister, contingent upon resigning from the post, was to receive one-seventh of $10,000,000 as profit if the plan went through successfully.

Sidelight on Past Career.

The matter was satisfactorily explained to Secretary Taft. At the time of the Bowen investigation Mr. Loomis admitted that he had endeavored to interest American capital in Venezuela to strengthen the relations of the two countries and to oppose the machinations of Europeans.

The present contention between the minority and majority interests in the Orinoco company, limited, was developed by the prominence recently given to the presence in this city of Rudolph Dolge, consular agent of the United States at Caracas.

This visit has been the means also of starting a factional dispute in the company, and drawing attention to the prominent part that interests identified with it had in furthering Mr. Loomis' political fortunes. It throws some interesting lights also upon that remarkable Venezuelan concession known as the Manoa claim, and recalls to mind its history, romantic and tragic.

Dolge Had Many Side Issues.

The presence in this city of Consular Agent Dolge last July called attention to that gentleman. It was charged that he had abandoned his post in Caracas for months at a time to give attention to the exploitation of the old Orinoco or Manoa concession in this country.

Incidentally attention was called to the fact that Mr. Dolge was head of a laundry in Caracas, where he had his consular office and displayed the coat of arms of the United States, that he was interested in two newspapers, which devoted much space to praise and adulation of Gen. Castro, who had decorated him with the order of Bolivar, and that he had been secretary of the American-Venezuelan mixed commission which had made an award to the Orinoco company, limited, against Venezuela.

Moreover, it was said Mr. Dolge had overstaid his leave of absence granted by Mr. Loomis and that he had been a particularly damaging witness at the inquiry.

Calhoun Told to Investigate.

Dolge admitted the main points in allegations, but explained they had been on a misleading application. It was shown that, as consular agent, he was permitted to engage in business ventures, among which was the exploitation of the Orinoco concession.

There were calls for Mr. Dolge's removal, and it was said one object of W. J. Calhoun's visit to Caracas as special commissioner is to investigate Dolge's political and business activities.

Among those who became interested deeply in the Dolge affair were the minority holders of the old Orinoco company, limited, including persons interested in the estate of C. C. Fitzgerald, the original concessionnaire; James A. Radcliffe, who had been receiver of the old Manoa company, and who had become interested in the Orinoco company, limited; and William M. Safford, who had long been interested in the old concession.

Connection Predated Appointment.

It is shown that Mr. Loomis' connection with the Venezuela concession holders and hunters started before he was accredited to that country. It was Mr. Safford who interested Chairman Kurtz of the Ohio republican state committee, and they, together, took up the work of assisting Loomis in his candidacy. Mr. Radcliffe later acted in conjunction with H. A. Odell, who also was interested in the Venezuelan exploitation upon the departure of Mr. Safford from London.

A batch of letters exchanged between the persons mentioned have fallen into the hands of Philistines and their publication forges a chain, showing that through a common friend Radcliffe joined with Kurtz in a general campaign in Venezuela for strengthening the old and procuring new concessions. With Loomis as minister the financing was to be done by Kurtz through Ohio connections and their affiliations.

Extracts from Correspondence.

Extracts from these letters read:

I have been spoken to by a leading buggy company of this place (Columbus is the chief point for that industry) of having an inquiry made concerning the new minister to Venezuela, where, and at Caracas, it is desired by this certain manufacturer to seek to establish business relations. The thing suggested to my mind the propriety and importance of as early an action as possible on our part in organizing the company proposed to me by Mr. Safford for the purpose of securing privileges down there.—Mr. Kurtz to Mr. Radcliffe.

I was much pleased with my visit from the cabinet minister [sic], who sailed on the 4th inst. Our opportunities for future business are simply unlimited.—Mr. Radcliffe to Mr. Kurtz.

"Minister in My Vest Pocket."

I can congratulate my western associates on Mr. Loomis' appointment, saying that I had met the gentleman, liked him, and knew well of him through mutual friends. They have since said I boast of carrying an American minister in my vest pocket. . . . I hope some friend will advise Mr. L. of the animus of such stuff.—Mr. Radcliffe to Mr. Kurtz.

I am just in receipt of a letter from my friend, in which he says he thinks there are plenty of concessions to be had, but that it is almost necessary, he believes, to come down and look over the field.—Mr. Kurtz to Mr. Radcliffe.

I trust "our friend" will not make the mistake of appearing to be interested in concessions. The more dignity he brings to the office the more valuable will its influence become to us. He can best serve us by apparent impartial indifference to their enemies. I believe "our friend" has a bright future. My only fear is from errors and inexperience. I shall be glad when I am in a position to advise him freely.—Mr. Radcliffe to Mr. Kurtz.

Ohio Interests in the Saddle.

But it was all "love's labor lost" for Radcliffe. He says that nothing of a beneficial character to him or his enterprises came out of his efforts in behalf of Mr. Loomis' candidacy as minister to Venezuela.

To the contrary, in a short time Ohio became the head and center of the greatest activity in relation to the financial undertakings in the South American country. Columbus leaped into prominence as a great financial center for the refunding of the Venezuelan debt, while the Orinoco company, over the straightening out of which Mr. Radcliffe and Mr. Safford had labored for years, passed by some process, as yet not quite clear, to the Orinoco corporation, with the chief offices at Cincinnati and Ohio interests in the saddle.

Venezuela Takes Summary Action Against French Company Under Federal Court Judgments of Aug. 4.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1905: By the New York Herald.]

CARACAS, Sept. 3.—In consequence of the judgment entered on Aug. 4 by the federal court Castro's government has ordered the French cable closed at all stations on the coast cables tomorrow as well as at the Caracas office. The company now can operate only at La Guayra and New York.

Communication with the interior by the National telegraph costs 19 cents a word. The government says the decision is provisional pending the arrival of the cable administrator, Bosquet, who is expected here on Sept. 27.

The company's representative here, M. Brun, requested a delay till the arrival of Bosquet, but without avail. He has communicated with the French government and its legation.

MRS. GEORGE W. EULETTE.

Mrs. George W. Eulette, 5502 Halsted street, who rescued Mrs. James R. Emery, 3412 South Park avenue, from drowning at Mill lake, Michigan, is an expert swimmer. When a little girl she used to go bathing in the lake at her parents' home in Milwaukee. She has taught her daughter and several of her friends how to rescue drowning persons. Mrs. Eulette is 30 years old.

As soon as her husband heard of the rescue of Mrs. Emery by his wife he took the first boat for Michigan. Word from the resort yesterday stated that the young woman was recovering from the excitement of the incident.

"I certainly would have drowned if Mrs. Eulette had not caught me when she did," said Mrs. Emery. "I was going down for the third time when she came to my rescue."

Mrs. Eulette is expected to return to Chicago today.

CURBING FEVER EPIDEMIC

NEW ORLEANS GAINS GROUND IN FIGHT AGAINST DISEASE.

Twenty New Cases and Three Deaths Given as Record for Day—Report Showing Status of Conditions at Other Points in State—Atlanta Board of Health Refuses Quarantine Against Infected Points in Neighboring Commonwealth.

Total cases to date	2,416
New deaths	3
Total deaths to date	316
New subfoci	11
Total subfoci to date	488

New Orleans, La., Sept. 3.—For the first time in over a month the number of new cases of yellow fever were in the twenties. With only three deaths, compared to eighty-three deaths on Sept. 3, 1873, the feeling of confidence that the fever is being wiped out is growing. Among the new cases is that of Capt. B. F. Clayton, United States army, the quartermaster in charge of this department. City Councilman E. T. Dunn is also on the list.

There has been a recrudescence at Tallulah, in Madison parish, not far from Vicksburg, two cases having been found. A report from Leeville, under date of Sept. 1, shows that there have been 321 cases there so far and twenty-nine deaths, with 145 cases under treatment.

Patterson, one new case.
St. Bernard, Corrine, two cases.
Terre Aux Boeuf one.
Morgan City, one new case.
St. Rose, three new cases.
Gulfport, five new cases.
Handsboro [north of Mississippi City], one case.
Vicksburg, two new cases.

Atlanta Refuses Quarantine.

Atlanta, Ga., Sept. 3.—The city board of health today refused to quarantine against yellow fever infected points. With two of the ten members of the board absent the vote stood five to three against putting up the bars, the physicians voting for the motion and lay members against.

Two More Pensacola Cases.

Pensacola, Fla., Sept. 3.—Two new cases and four suspicious ones was the yellow fever record here today, making a total of eight pronounced cases to date.

Missouri Order Against Illinois.

Cairo, Ill., Sept. 3.—Mississippi county, Mo., today ordered the Illinois state board of health to cease inspecting trains in Missouri in connection with the yellow fever quarantine. Secretary J. A. Egan of the Illinois board of health has instructed Assistant Secretary Palmer to inspect all trains on the river. St. Louis and Missouri inspectors are continually coming into Cairo, but the Illinois board of health will not retaliate by ordering them out of Illinois.

More Cases at Vicksburg.

Vicksburg, Miss., Sept. 3.—Two new cases of yellow fever were reported today, making a total of five under treatment. Both of the new cases are negroes.

PACKERS LIKELY TO SEEK DELAY.

Attorneys Expected to Ask for More Time When the Beef Trust Cases Are Called.

MOODY READY TO PROCEED

Indicted Men Will Be Arraigned Tomorrow Before Judge Otis Humphrey.

Further time will be requested, it is believed, by legal representatives of the packers, who are to be arraigned tomorrow before United States Judge Humphrey, to plead to the indictments of violating the anti-trust laws.

John S. Miller and the other legal representatives of the defendants, it is now understood, will make a motion to quash certain of the indictments, and will ask leave to enter demurrers to others. They will set forth that they have not had time to prepare their pleadings. In such an event it is considered likely that Judge Humphrey will allow the defendants another week in which to plead.

Attorney General Moody will start the case tomorrow, and if the defendants ask for further time he will not remain in the city, but will leave the preliminaries to Special Assistant Attorney General Pagin and District Attorney Morrison.

Moody Studying the Evidence.

Mr. Moody may remain here a day or two longer, however, to go over certain portions of the evidence which he has not already examined. He was engaged with it yesterday at his room at the Auditorium hotel. Mr. Moody for six years was a district attorney in Massachusetts and the work and the difficulties are familiar to him.

It can be announced with authority that neither the packers nor the government will select the judge who will preside at the trial of the indicted persons. It is considered likely that Judge Humphrey will have the case, but there is nothing certain about it. Any of the twelve judges of the circuit may preside. There can be no legal objection to him on the ground that he was the judge before whom the indictments were returned and that he fixed the bail of the defendants.

The case would properly be tried before either Judge Bethea or Judge Landis of this district, but both are disqualified. Judge Bethea, as district attorney, was active in the prosecution of the packers and Judge Landis, under President Cleveland's administration, proceeded against the packers as district attorney.

Humphrey Sits Here Frequently.

Judge Humphrey of the southern Illinois district has frequently been called from Springfield to Chicago to hear cases, and his selection is regarded as natural under the circumstances. The defendants in the beef trust inquiry have made no protest against him, nor are they expected to. Naturally they would prefer a judge of less experience and one more likely to make errors in ruling on evidence that they would be able to take advantage of later.

The disposition of the federal authorities is to proceed slowly in the preliminaries to the trial of the packers. Any error in ruling, it is admitted, will prejudice the government's case and it is the desire to avoid any such contingency.

President Roosevelt is informed of every important step taken in the case by Mr. Moody.

NEW ROYAL ARCANUM RATES IN LITTLE DANGER OF CHANGE.

Report of Assessment Committee Favoring Atlantic City Action Scatters Opposition at Put-in Bay.

Put-in Bay, O., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The report of the special committee on assessments of the Royal Arcanum, made Saturday night, and sustaining the new rates adopted in Atlantic City in May, has effectively ended the fight on the rules in this convention.

At the final meeting of the session tomorrow afternoon the proposition to repeal the rules will be voted upon and probably will be lost by a large vote, as the majority of the opposing delegates have left here.

All declined to state any opinion as to the likelihood of the matter being carried into the courts.

The impression exists that the feeling that this should be done has been modified by the addresses that have been made, several of the leading protestants against the new rates advocating that this be not done, no matter what the result of this session was.

LIFE SAVING CREW RESCUES TWO BROTHERS FROM LAKE.

Sailboat Capsizes Off Jackson Park and A. W. and Paul Degenar Are Nearly Exhausted When Help Comes.

Their frail sailboat having capsized and sunk in the lake more than a mile off Jackson park yesterday afternoon, A. W. and Paul Degenar, brothers, were rescued by the life saving crew of the Jackson park station. No trace of the boat, in which the brothers set out from the foot of Fifty-fifth street, was found.

Paul Degenar was handling the tiller when, under the heavy northwest wind, the craft lurched to one side. Before it could be righted it went down. The brothers struck out for the shore.

Paul had almost collapsed and was being assisted by his brother, when the life saving boat reached them. Hundreds of persons strolling in the park saw the accident.

Paul and A. W. Degenar live in New York. They are guests at the Hyde Park hotel.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE.

THREE FOR MAYOR IN NEW YORK RACE

Jerome's Refusal Leaves McClellan, Ford, Gaynor, and Complications.

DOG SAVES HUMANS; DIES.

Poodle Arouses Inmates of Burning Apartment, but Animal Fails to Escape.

NEW YORK BUREAU CHICAGO TRIBUNE. New York, Sept. 3.

Jerome's Refusal Leaves Three in Mayoralty Race.

Politicians—republicans and democrats—pondered today William Travers Jerome's authoritative statement, in which he said: "I will not, under any circumstances, be a candidate for the office of mayor at the forthcoming election." The wise ones declared it appeared as if three candidates for mayor would be correct—George Brinton McClellan, Tammany; ex-Senator John Ford, republican; Supreme Court Justice William J. Gaynor, Hearst.

Mr. Ford relies for support upon his advocacy of the original state franchise tax law which was so crude and ineffective that Theodore Roosevelt, governor at the time, was compelled to call an extraordinary session of the legislature and substitute amendments of his own before the law could be made constitutional.

Justice Gaynor's friends say he is a municipal ownership man from conviction. They say also he will not accept the Hearst nomination for mayor if Jerome is not on the ticket with him for district attorney.

Dog Rouses Sleepers and Is Itself Burned to Death.

"Fritzi Scheff" was ten pounds of fluffy French poodle, much in favor with the children of West One Hundred and Eighteenth street. It awoke from a doze by the bedside of its mistress, Emma Werner, on the top floor of an apartment house at 4 o'clock this morning. There was a strong smell of smoke in the room and it offended the dog's sensitive nose. It pawed its mistress a moment or two and then tore out into the hall whining and barking and roused the sleepers all over the house.

A stairway in the rear had burned and was falling to pieces. Before the tenants, still half stupid from sleep, realized it, there was a wall of fire on every floor between them and the street door.

Many escaped by a painter's scaffold outside and firemen rescued the rest. When the excitement was over and the fire extinguished the carcass of poor Fritzi was found in a hallway. The dog had been overlooked in the scramble for safety.

Haverly Tells Funny Story; Fined for Misconduct.

Bert Haverly, the minstrel; Revelly McCutcheon and J. J. McGirr, brokers, were arraigned in a west side court today on complaint of the proprietor of Mook's restaurant, at Forty-second street, near Broadway, charged with acting in a disorderly manner in the place. Policeman Kreuzer charged Haverly and McCutcheon with assault. When arrested Haverly gave the name of Edwin Stuart. Haverly denied the charges.

"Your honor," he said, "this is all a mistake. I didnot create a disturbance. I only told a funny story, and the waiters, bartender, and cashier made so much noise laughing at it that it set the place in an uproar. I couldn't help it if they wanted to laugh."

When the magistrate was informed of Haverly's identity he asked him why he gave a fictious name.

"Because," replied Haverly, "I depend upon my reputation for my living. I didn't want Klaw & Erlanger to see my name in the Sunday papers in connection with a barroom brawl."

Magistrate Moss fined the three men $10 each.

Dog Saves Woman from Attack by Husband.

If Brindle, the big bull dog owned by John Brunner of 940 Amsterdam avenue, does not wear a silver collar and live on the fat of the land it will not be the fault of Mrs. August Brunner, his daughter-in-law, whose life was saved from an attack by her husband by the dog. The young couple have been married fourteen months and have one child.

Brunner, a month ago, enlisted in the army as a single man, and was stationed at Fort Slocum. The wife traced him there and tried to have him discharged, but failed.

On Saturday night he called unexpectedly and quarreled. Just as his wife was preparing for bed he rushed into her room with a butcher knife and made a lunge at her. The woman thrust up her arms, receiving a cut across the fingers, but stopped the force of the blow. The knife blade, however, entered her throat, glancing off from the breast bone.

Mrs. Brunner screamed, and before her husband could strike her a second time the dog rushed into the room and leaped upon August and sank his teeth deep into the man's leg, dragging him to the floor. The father ran in, attracted by the noise, and before the husband could break away from the dog a policeman arrested him.

Duke Divorce Case a Big Surprise.

The announcement that James B. Duke, the tobacco magnate, has made application for a divorce from his bride of nine months has caused a greater sensation than did the news of his marriage last February to Mrs. Lillian McCredy of New York. There had not been the slightest hint of domestic infelicity up to the time they left for their summer home at Somerville, N. J., six weeks ago. It was understood the couple were about to take a trip to Europe. Later came a report that Mr. Duke had been suddenly called abroad on business and was obliged to leave Mrs. Duke behind.

Mrs. Duke was served with the papers yesterday. It is said she was greatly shocked, as she had no intimation of her husband's intentions.

It is reported Mr. Duke became suspicious early last summer and that his trip to Europe alone was undertaken to trap his wife, and that he employed two detectives to shadow her during his absence.

Flood and Wind Cause Much Damage.

A rain and wind storm of unusual severity swept over New York City early today, and wrought much damages in the way of flooded cellars, delayed traffic, and the crumbling of the walls of a number of buildings under construction. According to the official report of the weather bureau, 3.53 inches of rain fell. This flood taxed the sewerage facilities of the city, and in the downtown section overran the gutters and poured into cellars.

The underground conduits of the surface railroads became filled with water, causing numerous tieups.

In Brooklyn several partly constructed houses collapsed. The building authorities were constantly called upon to shore up walls which threatened disaster.

Archbishop Quigley Lays Corner Stone of New Church.

LAYS NEW CHURCH STONE

ARCHBISHOP QUIGLEY GUIDES GRANITE BLOCK INTO PLACE.

Exercises at Building in St. Gregory's Parish Are Held with Formal Ceremony Prescribed by Roman Catholic Ritual—Procession of Boys, in Cassocks, Leads Prelate to Structure—Father Thiele Makes Principal Address—Edifice Blessed.

With all the formal ceremony prescribed by the Roman Catholic ritual the corner stone of the new church building of St. Gregory's parish, at Paulina street and Bryn Mawr avenue, Summerdale, was laid by Archbishop J. E. Quigley yesterday afternoon. The ritualistic chants and prayers consumed two hours. At the close of the formalities addresses were made by the archbishop and Father A. J. Thiele of St. Aloysius' church.

The laying of the corner stone had been planned for several weeks and the foundation of the new edifice was decorated with flags and a platform was built beside it for the exercises. As the hour set for the opening of the exercises drew near, it seemed that rain would interfere with the celebration, but a large crowd had gathered at the church and showed an intention of remaining if the church officials were willing to proceed with the ceremony.

Procession Marches to Church.

A procession of men and boys in cassocks and cotts, led by a cross bearer, met Archbishop Quigley at Ashland and Foster avenues and proceeded to the church. The prelate was accompanied by Father Thiele, Father Sixt of St. Mathias' church, Father Zimmerman of St. Benedict's church, and Father Kirsch of St. Theresa's church.

After almost two hours of responsive chants by the priests and the vested choir the archbishop removed his clerical cope and berretta and put on his miter of gold cloth, and, stepping beside the granite block of stone, which was suspended a foot above its resting place, he placed his hands upon it and guided it, as it was lowered amid the slow chant of the men and boys in robes.

The procession which had brought him to the church formed again in line and passed through the excavation of the new building and around the foundation, Archbishop Quigley consecrating the ground by sprinkling it with holy water.

Makes Address in German.

As the group again mounted the platform Father Thiele stepped upon the temporary rostrum and addressed the spectators in German, the language which is spoken generally throughout the neighborhood. In short, terse sentences he emphasized the importance of the organization of a new church and the seriousness of the laying of the corner stone.

Archbishop Blesses Church.

Archbishop Quigley, again in his purple robes and berretta, followed him, and in his invocation asked for the divine blessing upon the church and upon the people who had helped to erect it.

"It is right that you, who have begun the erection of another temple to God, should receive his blessing. In this place generations yet unborn will receive the knowledge of God and his mercy long after the youngest child here today shall have gone into infinity. This knowledge cannot be picked up in the streets. You may not receive it in the schools or universities, but must come to the church to learn of it; and it is you who have organized this church who will give the opportunity of securing that knowledge to thousands of whom you do not dream."

It is expected that the church will be completed before the end of the year, and that the dedication services will be held on Christmas day. The building, of medium size and constructed of red brick, is to cost $50,000.

STONE OF JEWISH TEMPLE LAID

Exercises Are Held by Hungarian Congregation—2,000 Persons Witness the Ceremony.

In the presence of about 2,000 members of the First Hungarian Congregation Agudai-Achim, the corner stone of their new temple at Marshfield avenue and West Polk street was laid yesterday afternoon. The laying of the large corner stone was preceded by a number of addresses and a musical program by a juvenile band from the Jewish Orphan asylum. The principal speaker was Rabbi M. Fischer, who will be in charge of the new temple.

A feature of the ceremony was the plan by which the person who set the corner stone was selected. Each member of the congregation wrote on a slip of paper the amount of the subscription which he intended to give to the new building. It was found that Samuel Pitesle had donated the largest amount of money. The trowel was then handed to Mr. Pitesle and he placed the stone in position.

The new temple will be one of the largest houses of worship in the western states, seating 1,500 persons. The exterior will be of stone and the interior will be of marble. The building will cost $60,000.

TELLS OF AUTO TRAGEDY.

CHARLES CREELMAN SAYS HE WAITED LONG FOR HELP.

Owner of Machine Which Killed Carl Arbs Declares That Street Cars Dashed by Without Stopping, and Farmer Refused Aid As He Lay with Dead Chauffeur by the Roadside—Ambulance Finally Brings Relief—Sketch of Driver's Life.

Lying helpless on a lonely road, the body of his dead chauffeur in his arms, Charles Creelman says he waited nearly two hours after his automobile accident of Saturday night for help to arrive from Hammond, Ind. Car after car passed without stopping to offer assistance.

Trying to avoid a south bound Hammond electric car, Creelman's machine skidded on the slippery tracks at One Hundred and Nineteenth and Sheffield streets and threw the two occupants out, killing the chauffeur and injuring the owner.

The car that the machine turned out for sped along, although the motorman is said to have seen the rear lights of the automobile suddenly disappear. The touring car, on being hurled twenty feet by the force of its own momentum, in some way had crushed Carl Arbs, the young chauffeur, breaking his back and jaw. Mr. Creelman was rendered unconscious.

Mr. Creelman Describes Accident.

"It must have been an hour after the accident happened," said Mr. Creelman yesterday, "that I opened my eyes and found the wrecked automobile in the ditch beside me. I called to my chauffeur, but he did not answer. Then, in the dim light I saw his limp form a few feet away from me.

"I heard the tracks begin to hum, and, looking back, I saw the headlight of a car. 'There is help now,' I thought. 'I will hail the car, and have it take us in to Hammond.' The car approached rapidly and it seems to me the motorman could not have helped seeing us.

"'Stop!' I cried. 'Stop! A man has been killed!'—but the car sped on.

"After what seemed an interminable length of time I heard another car coming. Painfully I tried to raise myself up so that I might be seen. They couldn't help noticing me this time, I thought. But the car went on and left me alone with poor Arbs. Finally a farmer drove by in his wagon.

"'Can't you give us a lift here?' I cried.

"'Don't want to get mixed up in it,' he said, with a shake of his head, and he drove on."

Finally an ambulance came from Hammond and took Mr. Creelman and the body of his chauffeur into the town. At his residence, 4635 Ellis avenue, Mr. Creelman recovered rapidly. It was found that no bones had been broken. The physician said he would be out of bed in a few days.

The report of Mr. Creelman's injuries caused great anxiety to his brother, F. M. Creelman, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Creelman, who are in New York. James Creelman, the war correspondent and author, who is a cousin of the injured man, also was notified.

Brother Abandons Automobiling.

Carl Arbs, the chauffeur, with his brother Louis, was alone in a strange country. His father is a retired army officer and a resident of the city of Aarhus, Denmark. Louis is employed at a garage at Thirty-ninth street and Grand boulevard. Carl was an employé of the Hansen Automobile Repair company, 247 Michigan avenue. Both resided at 280 East Thirty-ninth street.

On hearing of his brother's death, Louis fainted. "It is the last time I shall take an automobile out," he said. "A week ago, with Mr. Creelman's brother, I nearly met with the same kind of an accident at the same place. It was I who persuaded my brother to make the trip."

PINIONED UNDER AN AUTO.

DANVILLE, ILL., EDITOR'S CAR GOES OVER BANK.

John H. Harrison, State Prison Commissioner, Is Chauffeur for Family Party, Speeding Along Shore of Wabash, When Wheels Slip and All Are Thrown Headlong — Mother, Uncle, and Aunt Bruised—Newspaper Man May Die.

Danville, Ill., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—John H. Harrison, editor of the Danville Commercial News and also state prison commissioner, probably was fatally injured and three others severely in an automobile wreck thirteen miles east this afternoon. The machine was running along a high embankment near the Wabash river when the wheels skidded and it rolled sixty feet to the bottom. Three occupants were thrown into the air and fell on soft ground. But Mr. Harrison, the driver, was pinned beneath the machine.

Spine Injury Causes Paralysis.

The injured were taken to Covington, Ind., where temporary aid was given them and then brought to a hospital here tonight.

Editor Harrison's spine is injured and he is partially paralyzed. There is fear of internal injuries. His mother, Mrs. Minta Harrison, has an ankle sprain and many bruises, while his uncle, Col. J. N. Harrison of Ottawa, Kas., has a broken arm and the latter's wife a broken collar bone.

The editor was held beneath the machine nearly an hour before aid arrived and lifted it. He is an appointee of Deneen to succeed Col. G. T. Buckingham as hospital trustee.

Auto, Man, Wife Go Over Cliff.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Unaware that his wife was a victim of the accident with him, Lurt White of Rocky River, who plunged over a ninety foot embankment in an auto at his home last night, broke down and wept when he saw her removed from the ambulance to the operating room.

He and his wife had returned home from a long drive. Mrs. White had dismounted, and while White was backing the machine into place in the rear of the yard it went through a fence and over an almost perpendicular bluff with him.

Mrs. White, hearing the fence break, seized the front of the auto in the hope of saving her husband, and was dragged over. It is believed she will die, but that he will recover.

NEED OF STATE CONSTABULARIES.

The Pennsylvania legislature at its last session passed a law creating a mounted state constabulary. The members of the constabulary will act as fire, fish, forest, and game wardens, but the chief object of the new institution is to maintain peace and order and catch criminals in the rural districts.

The police departments of American cities are often justly criticised for corruption and inefficiency, but on the whole they do their work tolerably well. The problem of preventing and securing the punishment of crime in the rural districts of the United States, on the other hand, has yet to be solved. The counties have peace officers in their sheriffs and the townships in their constables, but the way in which these officials perform their duties in most places leaves much to be desired. The rural constable usually has to eke out his subsistence by some private calling in addition to his public one, and when a crime is committed it often is hard to find him in time to get the culprit arrested before he has escaped or to secure needed evidence before it has been lost or destroyed. The sheriff and his posse may be called, but a man is seldom elected sheriff because of his fitness for the office, and the posse is an unorganized and inexperienced body of men which it takes some time to get together and which does not know what to do after it has been collected.

The situation is usually much aggravated where crime takes such a form as a lynching or a riotous strike. The township and county officials may be in sympathy with the lawbreakers and lack the inclination to suppress them, even though they have the power. The militia may be ordered out, but this is extremely expensive.

The best remedy for the evils to which the inefficiency of local officials gives rise in the rural districts is probably such a measure as that which has been adopted by Pennsylvania. A state constabulary, if free from improper influences, would be an organized force of capable and experienced men. Its members would be able to devote their whole time and energy to preventing crime and catching criminals. Local sympathies would not lead them to treat rioters differently from other lawbreakers. The best example of a state constabulary in this country is afforded by the famous Texas rangers. Organized originally as a protection against the Indians, they have been retained as a most effective check upon the horse thieves, cattle thieves, and other criminals who but for them would make profitable "ranching" in Texas much less profitable.

If property is to be made secure and life is to be made safe throughout the rural districts of the United States the state constabulary system probably will have to be generally adopted. Pennsylvania's experiment with it should be highly interesting and instructive.

AS TO MORMONISM.

Senator Cullom contributes to the North American Review for September an article on "The Menace of Mormonism." Whether it is a menace at the present time Mr. Cullom says is an open question. It is clear, however, from the tenor of his article that, while he considers it less of a danger than it once was, he regards it as still a danger.

The two worst features of Mormonism are polygamy and the hierarchy. Polygamy is less practiced now than formerly. Mormons claim this is due to the revelation forbidding it. But, as Senator Cullom points out, this revelation was not received until Judge Zane, chief justice of the territory of Utah, a former Illinoisan whose appointment Mr. Cullom secured, had made things extremely hot for the polygamists. The continued practice of polygamy shows the inhibition is not considered binding, and it would be easy, were conditions regarded as favorable, [illegible] get another revelation of different im[illegible]. The continuance of polygamy to an extent is a gross violation of law and of the solemn pledges the church gave the United States government on the admission of Utah as a state. An organization which has so little regard for law or for its own solemn, public pledges is not to be trusted.

Regarding the hierarchy, Senator Cullom says that "if it penetrates, as it once penetrated, into the affairs of citizenship; if it dictates, as it once dictated, courses of conduct at variance with the laws of the land under whose flag it claims protection and privilege—then it is a menace, and it is high time that we demanded reformation." Whether the hierarchy is as pervasive, powerful, and lawless as it formerly was would be difficult to say, but that neither in its motives nor in its methods does it accord with American ideas and with American institutions was rendered only too clear by the testimony at the recent investigation by a committee of the senate.

Senator Cullom offers no plan for securing the reformation of the hierarchy. With regard to polygamy, if the Mormons persist in its practice, he favors a constitutional amendment giving congress power to deal effectively with them. There probably will be a powerful agitation for such an amendment unless the Mormons show more disposition to submit to the requirements of public sentiment, law, and decency.

LABOR DAY.

Shops and factories will be closed today and work on buildings will be suspended while labor rests and parades. It is to be hoped the weather man will be in a good humor and will make the day pleasant so that those who wish to parade may do so in comfort and those who wish to picnic and seek recreation in other ways may get the most enjoyment possible out of their holiday. It is also to be hoped that union labor will temporarily patch up its factional differences, that the musicians will cease for the nonce their bickerings with the bandmasters and be prepared to make good music regardless of the color of their uniforms and the quantity of gold braid on them, and that the "wrecking crews" as well as the less strenuous and more peaceable workers will take a day off. These requirements being met Labor day in Chicago will doubtless be a success.

The first great labor parade in the United States took place in New York on Sept. 5, 1882, while the Knights of Labor were holding their general assembly there. The parade was repeated the next year on the first Monday in September, and labor organizations then began an agitation to have the state legislatures declare that day a legal holiday. They have been remarkably successful. Labor day is now a legal holiday in nearly all the states and territories. The only holidays which have received equally general statutory recognition are Washington's birthday, July 4, Christmas, and New Year's.

The difference between them and Labor day is that they are observed in city and country, while it is preëminently a city holiday. The farmer will work today if there is anything for him to do, which there probably will be, and the lonely village mechanic will stick to his job, if he have one. In the large cities there will be a close approach to a cessation of labor. The union organizations got the day made a holiday, and they formally celebrate it, but they are not the only ones who enjoy it. The day is becoming a complete or partial holiday for unorganized city workers. They are the beneficiaries of the labors of the unions.

OPENING OF THE SCHOOLS.

Tomorrow morning 285,000 children, or thereabouts, will take up their books in the schools of Chicago. They laid them down with joy three months ago. There is no day during the school year to which they look forward with such unalloyed satisfaction as the "last day." Formerly they looked forward with almost equal dissatisfaction to the "first day." It was the day that put a period to their liberty and doomed them to a life of toil. Educators, especially in large cities, are slowly acquiring the art of making the pursuit of learning a pleasure as well as a duty. They are discovering how to sugar coat the once nauseous pills of knowledge. To many of the children of Chicago the "first day," in consequence, will be almost as welcome as was "last day."

The city's schools are in good hands. The high requirements made of teachers and the system of promoting on no ground but merit are steadily increasing the strength of the entire teaching force. The new methods of instruction are making the work of pupils not only more agreeable but more beneficial. The rapid growth of the city has caused a chronic condition of congestion, but it is believed that, with the new buildings that recently have been erected, the number of seats and the number of pupils will be nearer equal this year than they have been for a long time. There is a shortage of teachers, but it is hoped this may be overcome by Jan. 1. On the whole the prospect is for the most successful year's work in the history of the Chicago schools.

PROTECTING THE SOLDIERS.

The general commanding the northern military division repeats the complaint about the saloons which cluster around army posts and demoralize soldiers. The military authorities have no control over the saloons, and the soldiers not having the canteen to go to cannot be kept out of them.

It is notorious that since the abolition of the canteen, saloons, many of them most disreputable, have sprung up around the army posts. Commanding officers have appealed to the licensing authorities to do something to abate the nuisance, but they have been deaf to the appeals. They see only the revenue side of the question. The more drinking places they license the more money there is to spend.

It is strange that the agitators who have done so much to demoralize the soldiers by the abolition of the canteen should make no attempts to suppress the saloons they have called into existence. If they were sincere in their anxiety for the protection of the soldiers against the drink habit they surely would try to establish an arid, liquorless zone around each post. They would appeal to state legislatures to enact laws forbidding the licensing of saloons within a certain distance of a post. Then the soldier on his days off would have to travel farther to get liquor and would not have time to take so many drinks.

The canteen should be reëstablished. But if congress cannot be induced to do that because of its fear of the earnest women who think they know best how to make soldiers good, state legislatures should be asked to enact laws which will prevent the opening of saloons at the very gates of an army post. Few legislatures will refuse to do it, for they will not be affected by the selfish motives which control local licensing authorities.

UNANIMOUS RAILROAD EMPLOYES.

The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers disapproves of legislation tending to deprive railroads of the rate making power. It does not assert, as some railroad men do, that such legislation would lead to a reduction of wages, but contends that it would, in all probability, prevent any advance. It urges members of the brotherhood to see or write to each senator or representative and urge him not to vote for a measure authorizing the interstate commerce commission to fix rates.

The Order of Railway Conductors at its recent convention adopted resolutions deprecating such an increase of the powers of the commission. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen has expressed itself to the same effect. It is for the enforcement of the laws against discrimination, rebates, and preferentials, but insists that no commission be authorized to make a rate.

The members of these organizations are intelligent men, who are able to think for themselves. But their unanimity of opinion in regard to the railroad rate question undoubtedly is due to what railroad presidents in the east and the west have been preaching. They have contended that the grant of the power to regulate rates to the interstate commerce commission would be followed by rate reductions which would entail wage reductions. This has had a manifest effect on many railroad employés, and perhaps on all.

The last report of the interstate commerce commission showed that there were in June 1,296,121 men on the pay rolls of the American railroads. Many of them are unorganized workers, but a number are united in strong and influential organizations. On the whole the men whom the railroad managers are rallying to their support are better organized than the shippers and producers in different parts of the country who are asking congress to increase the powers of the interstate commerce commission. The latter are the more numerous, but they have lacked the unity of action found on the other side. Next month the second national convention of the Interstate Commercial association will be held in this city. It is believed that about 500 delegates representing the commercial bodies which compose the association will be present. Its members have observed the persistent campaign of the railroad men against railway rate legislation, and consider it necessary to do a little campaigning on their own account.

The president will press the question of railroad rate regulation upon the next congress. It remains to be seen how much influence the united railroad employés of the country will have with the national legislature. Undoubtedly there are members who will oppose the legislation the president favors because they wish to be on good terms with the men who own railroads. Some of them may give as the excuse for their course the hostility of railroad labor organizations.

"THE city," observes the Philadelphia Press, "is a business concern." But too often the managers think it is none of the people's business how the concern is run.

LETTER OF MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

Copyright: 1905: By the Marquise de Fontenoy.

HENRY VINCENT HIGGINS, who has just been decorated by King Edward with the Victorian Order, has received this distinction, not for his former services in the army, in which he held a commission as officer of the First Life guards, nor yet in connection with his eminence as a member of the profession of the law, to which he took after leaving the army, but for his success in the management of the opera at Covent garden in London. Of course he has an American wife. Most men who stand high in the favor of their sovereign in England nowadays are thus blessed.

Mrs. Higgins was formerly Mrs. William Lawrence Breese of New York, and inherited a large fortune from her first husband, who died at Islip, L. I. She was originally a Miss Parsons of Columbus, O.; is a sister of that May Parsons who at the close of the war between France and Germany in 1870 married the German prince of Lynar, and is therefore a cousin of Mrs. George L. Reeves and a niece of Mrs. S. S. Whiting of New York. Henry Higgins, though he stands six feet three in his stockings, is quite a pigmy compared to his father, the "gentle giant" of six feet eight, who used to write so much for the London Times under the pen name of "Jacob Omnium," who was the intimate friend and crony of Thackeray and repeatedly portrayed by the latter in his novels. Harry Higgins is a busy man. Besides being the chief of the triumvirate, composed of Lady de Grey, M. Faber, and himself, who manage the Covent Garden opera, he is a director of Ritz's hotel in Paris, of Claridge's in London, and heaven only knows of how many other concerns besides. He has abandoned horse racing, however, and the stable which he used to own in partnership with the late duke of St. Albans and Sir George Chetwynd is now broken up.

In view of the many advertisements which are appearing in the European papers containing offers of titles of nobility, together with illustrious and historic names, in return for cash payments, and to be obtained through adoption as the children and heirs of the present authentic holders thereof, the German government has considered it wise to issue semi-officially a warning to the effect that the laws with regard to adoption are strict and do not lend themselves to transactions such as those advertised in the press.

To begin with, adoption if accomplished in accordance with the requirements of the law carries with it merely the name but not the nobiliary title of the adoptive father, and not merely fine but also imprisonment fall to the share of any one who makes use of a nobiliary title in Germany without full legal warrant. Then, too, the adoptive father or mother must be childless, without legal heirs to name, title, and property, must be over fifty years of age, and at least twenty years older than the person adopted, the principal object of adoption being in the eyes of the law to enable those who for one reason or another find themselves childless to create for themselves, in this way, a family and the establishment of filial and parental relations conducive to home life. Moreover, the adoption must be carried out in the presence and with the consent of the courts of law of the district in which the person making the adoption has his or her legal residence.

The agents who advertise the sale of titles of nobility and of historic names by means of adoption content themselves as a rule with merely drawing up a contract between the adopter and the adopted, whereby the former extends his name and title to the latter as an adopted child. On the strength of these contracts, which are embellished with all sorts of stamps and seals, the aspirant to nobiliary honors and names pays down more or less considerable sums of money, which are divided between the vendor and the broker. But the transaction is fraudulent from beginning to end, the contract is not worth the paper that it is written on, and should the adopted "child" venture to make use of either the name or the title which he fondly imagines himself to have acquired, he would be quickly jailed, fined, and sentenced to a term of imprisonment. If there are so few prosecutions by the victims of these swindles, it is because as a rule they do not care to expose themselves to the ridicule inevitably entailed by the proceedings.

The laws of Germany about adoption are on the same line with those of other European countries, and if I draw attention thereto it is because of the widespread publicity given to the story of an alleged Princess Anne Esterhazy, who now lives in straitened circumstances in Paris, and who offers to adopt any one and thus to share her name and her title with whoever is willing to pay the trifle of $100,000 for the questionable privilege. Just how the princess, who claims to be an Esterhazy by birth and to be the widow of a Parisian financier, proposes to go about it, she does not explain. But it may be just as well under the circumstances to point out that the princely branch of the historic house of Esterhazy comprises no member of the name of Anne.

In fact there are only three Princesses Esterhazy in existence, one of them Princess Marguerite, the wife of the chief of the family; the second her 5 year old daughter Marie, while the third, a Countess Andrassy by birth, is the wife of Prince Nicholas and makes her home with him at Budapest. Nor is there even any woman among the numerous members of the junior branches of the family who bear the title of count and countess who would answer the description of the alleged princess at Paris, who must be set down, therefore, as either a crank or a fraud.

The only means by which any American can obtain a foreign historic name and title is, if a woman, through marriage with some foreign nobleman; and if a man, then through marriage with the daughter of some Spanish noble, the heiress of dignities. For in Spain, alone of all European countries, the strange law prevails by which titles descend to and through women, and which, when borne by them in their own right, become the property of their husbands along with their name. Thus in Spain if a duke has a daughter and no sons, but merely nephews, his titles at his death will go, not to his brother's sons nor to his nearest relatives in the male line, but to his daughter, and if the latter is married, also to the latter's husband, no matter whether he be a Spaniard or a foreigner.

If the impending marriage of Lord Huntly's nephew, young Douglas Gordon, to Miss Streatfield attracts so much attention throughout Scotland, it is because the Gordons, in spite of their faults, are exceedingly popular in the land of cakes, and from time immemorial have maintained a strong hold on the affections of their fellow countrymen. Moreover he is an object of particular interest, as being after his father the only remaining direct heir of Lord Huntly. Few peerages seemed better provided with heirs than this marquisate of Huntly forty years ago. The late marquis, father of the present peer, and grandfather of Douglas, had no less than seven sons. Of these the second, Lewis, perished at sea as a sublieutenant of the ironclad Captain, which turned turtle during a storm in the bay of Biscay and sank with her crew of 600 men on board. Lord Bertrand, the third son, got into a scrape at home while still a schoolboy, which necessitated his being sent out in hot haste to the antipodes, where he died at the age of 19. Lord Randolph died as a child. Lord Douglas, popularly known as "Briggs," renowned for his shrill high pitched voice, and his brother Lord Esme both died a few years ago without male issue, and only two of the brothers remain: namely—Lord Huntly, who is childless, and Lord "Grannie," the father of Douglas Gordon.

It is not generally known that there are a large number of Gordons, legitimate members of this historic family, who figure to this day in the nobilities of Germany, Austria, Russia, and Scandinavia. Most of them are descended from Lord Henry Gordon, younger son of the second marquis of Huntly, who after the death of Charles I. migrated to Poland with his sister, Lady Katherine. The latter married the grand treasurer of Poland, Count Andrew Morsztyn, and it was her great grandson, Stanislas Poniatoski, who was the last king of Poland. Lord Henry Gordon was naturalized as a Polish nobleman under the name of marquis of Huntly-Gordon in 1658, the decree signed by King John Casimir of Poland being still in existence. His lineal descendant in the male line, who still bears the same title, lives in Warsaw today.

THE WISDOM OF THE BOY

[Copyright: 1905: By Tribune Company.]

He knows what word the crickets pass
One to another in the grass;
The spider points to pasture lands
In quick response to his demands;
The ladybug spreads frightened wings
When come his warning whisperings;
And he can pitch in thrilling key
The warsong of the bumblebee.

The varied pipings of the birds
Are plain to him as spoken words;
The odd sideglances of the jay
Are gestures coaxing him to play;
He knows what hour the swallows skim
Across the pond from rim to rim;
Knows where the drifting hawk is bound,
The while it circles round and round.

The world of fancy—best that is!
That wonder world is all of his,
For in his wood the elf and gnome
And sprite and goblin idly roam—
All this is true, for he has seen
Their forms dance down the aisles of green,
And he has heard their catch and trill
When all the world about was still.

And he knows where the cloudships go
When they are beating to and fro,
And he knows what the trees have said
When each bent down its heavy head
As though the winds were high and strong—
The winds that bear to him a song.
Ah, this is wisdom undefiled,
The soulborn knowledge of the child,
The bookless learning, free and glad—
The wondrous lore that once we had.

POINTS WAY FOR CZAR TO SAFEGUARD EMPIRE.

Russian Writer Discussing Future Policy Sees Need of Protecting Slav Cause Against German Aggression.

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 3.—Alexander Briantchininoff, correspondent of the St. Petersburg Slovo, writing regarding the future policy of Russia, says:

"It is an axiom that a great country cannot consider its frontiers as definitely fixed until its provinces have obtained free and unobstructed access to the sea. Germany has her ports on the North sea; England, the Atlantic ocean; France, the Atlantic and Mediterranean; while the United States, flanked by two oceans, is in a better position than any European country, and for this reason must certainly in the near future play a great rôle in the world's politics.

"Russia, owing to this unfortunate and regrettable war and to the conditions on which peace have been obtained from Japan, loses her absolute preponderance in the far east; but it is to be hoped that she will be wise enough to recommence the badly begun adventure in Manchuria. She will have to be satisfied to regain through commerce what she has lost through the army. Vladivostok, frozen for four months every year, with Japanese sentinels all around her, cannot have a sufficient political value to counterbalance Japanese ambition, so that a frank understanding between Japan and Russia is necessary in order that the two countries shall be sure of each other's good faith.

"The maintenance of Chinese integrity certainly enters into this program, as it is only through peace being insured in the far east that Russia can be free to confine her activities to the European stage, where her presence will soon become indispensable. No matter what the future of the control of the gateways to the Baltic may be, that sea never will be for Russia anything else but a sea closed by ice. So it was natural for Russia sooner or later to begin again her efforts to gain an open port to the southward.

"To attain this object there are only two ways, the Persian gulf and the Bosporus. The first is easier, Persia being in a state of disintegration, while the Indian army, although quite capable of defending India, is not in a position to go to the defense of Persia. Germany certainly would help Russia's scheme in the Persian gulf if it were left free in the Bosporus, while if Russia tried to reach the Bosporus she would have to face German opposition and fight Turkey, which is much stronger than Persia. England at most would remain passive. Still, the conquest of the Bosporus would be the best Russia could do, as to reach the Persian gulf would necessitate forcing a way several thousand miles. It would not be dissimilar to the index which took her to Port Arthur. She would advance between two rivals.

"On the other hand, if she directed her efforts toward the Bosporus and offered some facilities to England in the south of Persia, she could be tranquil. On the east she would be in a position to protect the Slav cause against German influence, which is growing every day. On the eastern side she would prevent Germany from being paramount in Europe.

"Finally, there is another reason for which it is time that Russia should understand that she must rely on England, and not on Germany. Germany is the power of today and is putting forward every effort to make England the power of yesterday and prevent the rising of the power of tomorrow—Russia—at the head of a great Slav confederation. France, which is undoubtedly the power of yesterday, has realized this and has entered into an understanding with England while still an ally of Russia.

"Alexander III. realized it when he joined hands with France, but after him a clear political object on the part of Russia was lost. The duty of Russia toward her Slav brothers was abandoned, was forgotten, and the country with eyes closed threw herself into the hazardous game which naturally ended in a catastrophe. If now Germany succeeds in pushing Russia into the Persian gulf, the adventure will mean a quarrel with England, coolness toward France, and the sacrifice of the Slavs of Austria and Turkey on the altar of German ambition. It will finally mean a new conflagration with Japan and England combined, with Germany looking for her own interests, at most neutral.

"If, on the contrary, a quadruple understanding could be reached between the two dual alliances, France and Russia on one side and England and Japan on the other, having as an object the protection of their Asiatic, African, and Australian possessions, Russia might easily reach her object on the Bosporus and support Italy and the Slavs when the inevitable question of the Austrian succession arises.

"In this way the threatening imperialism of Germany would be quenched and the European equilibrium would be safeguarded, a thing which is necessary for the influence of the United States in the Pacific. However, to be able to direct the Russian politics to these far distant but natural and possible aims, it is necessary first to clear the Russian foreign office of German traditions and personnel and have true diplomatists like Witte, and not clerk diplomatists in charge of Russia's foreign policy, all of which will be more difficult than was the conclusion of peace with Japan."

SECRETARY BONAPARTE STRIKES AT SYSTEM IN BENNINGTON CASE.

Richard Weightman Says Naval Head Expected to Show Present Course of Training at Annapolis Does Not Make Experts in Anything.

BY RICHARD WEIGHTMAN.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—There is a great deal more than appears on the surface in Secretary Bonaparte's action anent the Bennington explosion. Of course, everybody thinks he was right in refusing to make a scapegoat of Ensign Wade, the young officer recommended for court martial in the first place.

It was perfectly obvious that to saddle the whole responsibility on Wade would be an outrage. That would have been equivalent to dismissing the whole incident as a result of individual negligence or incompetency, whereas almost all thinking men regard it as one more illustration of an improvident and vicious system.

Mr. Bonaparte's decision to have a court martial for Commander Lucien Young is, therefore, generally accepted as the inauguration of a thorough and searching inquiry into the present personnel law of the navy, its nature and its operation, its virtues and its faults.

This law, enacted in 1899, was regarded with many misgivings by the best informed and most up to date men of the service. The older officers—those on the retired list and those rapidly approaching it—had no strenuous opinions. The modern battleship was outside of their experience, and they entertained it chiefly as a theory.

Navy Men Jacks of All Trades.

One of these told me today that he now realized the defects of the law and the virtual impossibility of securing the highest efficiency under it. He frankly admits, however, that at the time he saw no danger in it because he had not the gift of prophecy whereby to see the development of the modern battleship. The younger officers, on the other hand—soon to become commanders, captains, and admirals—realized the peril involved in a system which proposed to turn out navigators, ordnance experts, mathematicians, steam engineers, and fighters by means of a single curriculum.

They saw the battleship steadily growing more complicated, steadily calling for more completely equipped specialists in the various departments of its forces, and it seemed to them that the attempt to convert Annapolis into a factory for jacks of all trades was fraught with futility and disappointment. Instead of preparing the individual for excellence in some particular line the system proposed to make him pretty good in all lines.

With the whole world dividing itself into specialties—in medicine, in art, in science, in law, in statesmanship—congress saw nothing grotesque in an arrangement which put the new battleships at the mercy of general practitioners, trained for nothing in particular but expected to turn their hand to everything that came along.

Training Course Too Varied.

The graduate of Annapolis was to be a dab at all branches of his profession—ordnance, navigation, gunnery, steam engineering—and in pursuance of that idea he was put aboard the modern man of war—a bundle of the most complex and intricate machinery ever created by human genius—and held strictly responsible for the smallest departure from excellence in the discharge of his bewildering duties.

The ship itself is the product of twenty different sets of experts, but the far more difficult task of actuating and controlling the ship was confided to officers prepared with only a general education!

In practice, as is well known, these officers gradually developed special fitness in various lines, but it seems not to have occurred to congress that this special fitness should have been ascertained and cultivated at the academy instead of leaving its development to the interrupted and sometimes thwarted evolution of accident.

Naval officers, therefore, believe that Secretary Bonaparte has in view an exposition of the vices of the system. No one who knows him at all well imagines that he would consent to the sacrifice of Ensign Wade in any event. This young man has been only two or three years in the service. He was not educated especially in steam engineering at Annapolis, and had, of course, had no practical experience of a nature to make up for that deficiency.

Wade Not Expert Engineer.

He was a little of an engineer, to be sure, but not enough for an emergency. Moreover, it now turns out that the Bennington was not provided with a warrant machinist such as is usually furnished to every one of our warships. Thus a calamity which might have been averted by a line officer or a warrant officer expert in steam engineering could not properly be saddled on a young ensign of brief service, whose knowledge in that particular branch was necessarily theoretical, and, even at that, only acquired as one item in a much too complicated program of education.

Such is Secretary Bonaparte's position, and herein he has the sympathy and approbation of all fairminded men, whether in private or official life. The case of Commander Lucien Young is different in many important respects. He is an experienced naval officer of long service and with an excellent record. If responsibility can, under the circumstances, be put upon any one connected with the Bennington, obviously it should be put upon the commanding officer. It is generally believed, however, that the secretary does not intend to charge Commander Young with criminal negligence, but rather to elucidate through the medium of a court martial the extravagant absurdity of a system which populates the service with jacks-of-all-trades, and then demands the same results as might be expected from an assortment of thoroughly trained specialists.

Young Officers Rejected.

This absurdity has, within the last few days, been brought home to Mr. Bonaparte with peculiar force by the rejection of ten young officers rejected for promotion to lieutenancies because they could not pass muster in steam engineering. The service is in sad need of junior officers for watch duty and the general run of ship's work, and these youngsters easily might have fitted in most usefully and in the end made valuable and worthy officers.

But they had no turn for engineering—in other words, they did not know everything—and so the service is sacrificed to pedantry. If the court martialing of Commander Lucien Young should bring out, as we all believe it will, the stupidity and futility of the present arrangement the country will have fresh cause for gratulation.

The American people have at last awakened to the importance of an efficient navy. The next thing is to persuade them of the importance of having that navy manipulated with high intelligence and skill. As the law now stands such a consummation is impossible. Under the operation of an enlightened amendment of that law, we may easily have the best, and strongest, and most efficient navy in the world

NEWS OF THE THEATERS.

THE SCHOOL FOR HUSBANDS.
A Comedy in Four Acts.
BY
STANISLAUS STANGE.
Presented at Powers' Theater, Chicago, by Alice Fischer and Her Company, Sept. 3, 1905. The Cast:

Betty	Miss La Follette
Capt. Lovel	Alfred Hudson Jr.
Sir John Manners	Joseph Kilgour
Lady Belinda Manners	Alice Fischer
Clarissa Huntley	Frances Stevens
Prince Assam	Paul Everton
Lady Airish	Jane Wheatley
Lady Speakill	Jennie Reifferth
Lady Tattle	Barbara Clement
Lord Foppington	George Paxton

"The School for Husbands," by Stanislaus Stange, is a light opera libretto farce decked out in the furbelows of the patch and powder period. It was presented at Powers' last evening, thus inaugurating the regular fall season of that playhouse, and the performance given by Alice Fischer and her company kept an audience of large size agreeably entertained until after 11 o'clock. The praise for the entertainment must go to the players, however, for their efforts, rather than the play itself, made the evening enjoyable. Miss Fischer as a stellar luminary in the theatrical firmament was an unknown quantity here in Chicago, but she proved herself an actress whose rollicking, wholesome personality and hearty, infectious laughter won her the liking of her onlookers, and whose robust, good natured abilities as a fun maker enabled her to keep her auditors pleasantly amused. Years of experience have made her mistress of the technic of her profession, and her acting is marked by a surety, ease, and poise which make it both effective and commendable. It is rollicking and at times boisterous, but it is unmistakably genuine in its heartiness and spirit, and for this reason appeals.

The rôle Miss Fischer is asked to assume is that of an eighteenth century wife who is neglected by her husband. He married her for love, she him for position. She had come to love him, but he neglects her for cards, wine, and the fashionable women of his set. She grows weary of his indifference and, accepting the advice of her friends, plays at being the social butterfly. Her rivals try to blacken her reputation and her husband grows jealous of the attentions she receives, but she succeeds in discomfiting the former and pacifying the later. The piece ends with the husband so meekly schooled that he begs for forgiveness and favor. Miss Fischer has poor material with which to work, but by the geniality of her presence, her generous smile, her skill in making the "point" of her speeches carry swiftly home, and her abilities to keep the tempo of every scene bright and rapid, she succeeds in winning approval for herself and in making her audience enjoy itself. Most of her work is along broad comedy or farce lines, but the one or two moments of emotional work which have place in the course of the play she handles convincingly.

The play itself is artificial, unnatural, and "made" in the last degree. The plot, as well as nearly all the fun business, is old to the point of venerability and the dialogue, while including many clever epigrammatic and witty lines, is so palpably manufactured after long and patient endeavor, that it lacks all semblance of spontaneity and naturalness. And many of the speeches are platitudinous to an inexcusable degree. As for the plot, all its joints are visible and the dramatic machinery creaks painfully much of the time. The possibilities for a bright, merry comedy are contained in the story. Mr. Stange has employed but he has been unequal to putting them to their best and most effective use.

The supporting company is generally competent. Mr. Kilgour as the husband who receives the schooling has little chance to prove his known powers. In the first act he is intoxicated and during the other three he is henpecked—neither of which states is calculated to win any vast amount of sympathy or respect. All that can be done with the poor material furnished Mr. Kilgour does, and the audience rewarded him with the approval earnest endeavor merits.

The best rôle in the play is that of Foppington, the "glass of fashion and the mold of form." It is of the eighteenth century dandy manner, and was excellently played by Mr. Paxton. There was an avoidance of exaggeration which was praisemeriting, an air of elegance, and later a hint of manly sincerity which lent the characterization distinct value. It was the work of the evening which stood out most clearly and vividly.

Miss Stevens in the part of Clarissa, a merry little country minx who has come up to town to capture a husband, has a rôle which she presents in uncommonly bewitching and satisfactory style. She was a delight for the eye and her sweet voiced, neat utterance of the text and her spirited, intelligent acting told of abilities from which still better things may be expected later on. Mr. Everton was obliged to appear as an Indian prince, the like of which was never before found outside of a comic opera. It is an impossible rôle, but the actor by some miracle of histrionic power succeeded in preventing this spouting oriental from seeming absolutely ludicrous. The audience did not laugh at him all of the time, and to accomplish this much is to achieve the wonderful.

Miss La Follette, the winsome daughter of a famous father had the small part of the maid, but she did it simply and therefore commendably. The famous father was present in the parquet and looked the approval that the young player deserved. Mr. Hudson appeared as a cad of a "goody goody" friend, and Miss Wheatley, Miss Reifferth, and Miss Clement as the three gossiping, sharp tongued women, without whom no supposedly eighteenth century comedy of manners would be complete, wore the handsome costumes befitting their station and chattered maliciously, as they should. Mr. Stange has given them little of worth or point to say, but they said the little acceptably. The play is richly and tastefully costumed, and is adequately mounted and stage managed.

Last night "As Ye Sow," a new melodrama of the New England variety, had its first production at McVicker's before a sold out house. Comment is deferred.

CATCH THE CRIMINALS.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As it is universally admitted that the police force of this city is wholly inadequate to insure comparative safety, does it not seem the height of folly for the new chief to employ his much needed men in chasing gamblers on the lake! These men are not criminals but simply lawbreakers. Surely the daily occurrence of robbery at the point of revolver and frequent murders calls for the employment of every officer in hunting and capturing some of the fiends which infest this, the most crime ridden city of the country.

Origin of Architecture.

[From the Architectural Record.]

Our architecture came in the first place from Greece; Egypt, Assyria, Persia, India, and the far east have had but slight influence upon it, compared with that wielded by the small, arid, mountainous country where, nearly 3,000 years ago, men made, in the domains of art and thought, investigations and experiments which are of immediate and direct value to us even today. One cannot reflect upon this without a feeling of astonishment. It shows us the closeness of our connection with the people of distant ages, the community that exists, in spite of seeming differences, among the human species on our planet. A well conducted experiment performed at one spot on the earth and in one hour of time can be of use to the whole world and through all the ages. The Greeks of the sixth and fifth centuries B. C. made such an experiment as this when they thought of a certain form of temple with columns, and laid down certain rules for its construction. And we of the twentieth century turn to the subtle minded Greeks of 2,400 years ago when we have to deal with a problem in architecture and want to know how to solve it with elegance and precision.

SOX BAT WEAKLY AND ARE BEATEN

Lose Game on the South Side Grounds to the Crippled Cleveland Team.

"RED" DONAHUE A PUZZLE

Locals Fail Utterly When Base Hits Would Mean Runs—Score Is 3 to 1.

The crippled White Stockings brought the shattered Napoleons back from Cleveland yesterday for a one day stand on the south side grounds, and something like 10,000 rooters braved rain and chilling weather to see Jones' men bag a supposedly easy game. But Cleveland, with a joke third baseman, caught the Sox napping, and trimmed the pennant seekers with considerable ease, the score being 3 to 1.

"Red" Donahue was the chief obstacle in the path of the Sox. Although he was hit as often as was Roy Patterson, he was a stingy individual when it came time to make runs. Both teams registered seven safeties, but the Sox's hits were scattered all the way from Thirty-ninth street to the loop, while the Naps bunched three of theirs in one inning, to such good purpose that they won the game without more ado.

Play on Slippery Field.

The going was heavy and slippery from the recent soaking given the grounds, and the players slipped and slid around amusingly. Three different times runners were thrown out by infielders who had slipped and sat down in stopping grounders. Leber, the amateur picked up by the Naps to fill Bradley's shoes, rattled around in them ludicrously. The Sox made him their chief target, and four of their seven hits were made in his direction. The locals started out bunting toward third and beat out a couple of them easily. Then the youngster played in for bunts and they hit a couple past him. Once Donohue stole third because Leber stood stock still and did not cover the base. But with all this the Sox could not win, because they were helpless when runs were in sight.

Good Things That Go Wrong.

Jones beat out a bunt in the first inning, after Leber had thrown out Holmes, but Davis and Isbell could not budge him off first. In the second with two out Sullivan beat out a bunt and Tannehill rapped one over Leber's head, but Patterson struck out. In the third the Sox registered their lone tally. With Holmes out of the way Jones smashed a double to right center and stole third when Clark threw to second, catching him off that base. Davis cracked a liner to right which was long enough to score the run, and Isbell flied.

The Sox had opportunities enough after that but never scored again. Donohue opened the fourth with a double and stole third, after Callahan had been retired at first by Donahue. But Sullivan and Tannehill popped out. In the seventh Callahan led off with a two bagger. Sullivan sacrificed him to third and he died there, as Tannehill and Patterson were easy.

Flick's Hit a Winner.

Meantime the visitors went out three in a row for three innings. They threatened to tie the game up in the fourth when Bay doubled to left with one out, but he was run to death on Flick's rap to Patterson, and Stovall was the third out. In the sixth Cleveland jumped in and won out. It all happened after Clark and Donahue had been retired, too. Jackson pickled a single to center and stole second. Bay rolled one through shortstop, but Jackson was held at third. Flick hit a dozen vicious fouls, a couple of which just missed being fair, but Patterson would not take the warning and pass him. So Flick finally pulled one just inside the right foul line good for two runs and two bases and that settled it.

Clark opened the eighth with a double and was sacrificed to third, but got no farther. Stovall made it safe in the ninth with a three bagger through left center to the bleachers and scored on Turner's line fly to Jones. Score:

Notes of the White Sox Game.

Easy money thrown away.

Holmes started a roar of applause when he robbed Turner of a long hit by pulling down the drive far out in left center after running under full head of steam all the way.

Instead of morning and afternoon games in Detroit today, as scheduled, the two games will be played in the afternoon for one admission, as the Detroit club is drawing poorly.

Leber had the sympathies of the fans all the way, and they cheered loudly when he grabbed Holmes' bunt in the eighth and threw his man out, although he slipped and fell while making the throw. Only a Carr could have reached the throw, however.

With one out and Clark at third Jackson hit to Isbell, who sat down squarely as he got the ball, but threw the batter out from that position. If Clark had started on the hit he could have scored easily before Isbell could have sent the ball home.

Manager Jones was at second, with one out, when a snap throw from Clark to Turner cut off his retreat. He turned and dashed for third and landed safely. Clark's throw was low and Turner juggled it just long enough to give the manager his life and Chicago a run.

President Comiskey has wired Capt. Rohe of the New Orleans club to report immediately, and Manager Frank replied that Rohe would join the Sox in Detroit, as the Pelicans already have the pennant cinched. The player will be needed in case of further accidents.

The Sox left last night for Detroit where they expect to play six games in three days. They are scheduled for two today, and one each on Tuesday and Wednesday, but have two postponed games and a tie to work off there. One of these cannot be disposed of unless an open date later in the year can be utilized for it.

The Sox are greatly broken up by Dundon's injury. They do not mind his absence from the infield at this critical moment so much as the fact he probably will be disfigured for life. He is popular with all the players, and the accident has depressed their spirits more than a dozen defeats could.

TWO 1 TO 0 GAMES AT LEAGUE PARK.

Chicago Nationals and Pittsburg Each Win a Contest by the Same Score.

FIRST GOES 11 INNINGS.

Casey's Triple Brings Victory—Second Affray Ends in Sixth Inning.

Battling through seventeen innings of baseball, in which two games were decided, Chicago's Third Nationals broke even with Pittsburg in the final games of the season played by the Pirates on the west side grounds yesterday.

The scores of the two contests were the same, each being 1 to 0, but it took Manager Chance's men eleven long innings to take the measure of Barney Dreyfuss' "place" crowd, while the latter got credit for a victory after only six innings had been completed of the second contest.

Like the scores, the base hits registered by each team in both games were twins, three safe drives being made by each side in the first and second contests.

Perhaps 8,000 persons took their first lesson in winter acclimation and shivered through the three hours and a half. During the early part of the first game a light drizzle in addition to the cold kept the fans from showing enthusiasm, but when inning after inning went past without a man reaching the counting station and the contest passed into extra rounds, there was rooting—as much as any crowd of such proportions is capable of. This continued until the locals finally shoved the winning run over on an error; and the abbreviated contest which followed also gave the fans an opportunity to open their lungs and warm up.

Pirates' New Pitcher.

Manager Chance presented a change in his lineup, Johnny Evers being back at his old stand at second base, while "Circus Solly" Hofman held down the initial sack. Both played baseball all the way. Fred Clarke also had some new ones to show the public. Ganley filled in at right field, but the most interesting novitiate was a youngster from the Western league, on the slab in the second game. The youngster's name is Leifield. He pitches from the south side and his action resembles an owl car with a flat wheel going over the North Clark street bridge at 2 o'clock in the morning. Leifield is a slim youth and has a left leg which seems about two inches longer than it really ought to be. He sticks this speed propeller in the ground with every delivery and when the ball is out of his hands his toes are facing the other way. But these characteristics are no detriment to Leifield's pitching ability, and he held Chance's men in a strong grip and made a most creditable performance for a "first nighter."

Wicker Versus Phillippe.

The way the first game started it looked as if there would be no chance to play two games. Bob Wicker and Phillippe engaged in a real pitchers' battle and there was no telling when it would end. For five innings the "Deacon" held the Third Nationals hitless. They managed to accumulate three safeties all in different innings in the six rounds that followed. But while Phillippe was doing all this Bob Wicker was pitching even a greater game. Three safe wallops were also pumped out of his delivery, but they all came early in the battle and were scattered. When the serious work began, from the fifth to the finish, not one Pirate was able to stick the sphere into safe territory.

How the Runs Are Made.

The right chance for victory did not come until the eleventh inning, when the Third Nationals won out. Slagle was gone when Casey sent a drive to the right corner of the field. He was on third when the ball was returned to the diamond. The Pirates pulled the infield up close, but when Hofman poked an easy grounder to Howard the first baseman threw badly to the plate and Casey was across the pan with victory.

Jake Weimer went to the slab for Chicago in the second game and Manager Clarke trotted out his new "sidewheeler." For five rounds neither team was able to count, although several chances presented themselves. In the sixth, which had been announced as the last, the Pirates turned the lock just before closing time and won. Clarke started the round with a mighty wallop to the left field bleachers for two bases and advanced to third on Leach's sacrifice. Wagner's grounder to Tinker, which killed off "Hans" at first, enabled Clarke to score.

Notes of the Third Nationals' Game.

Wicker passed only one man.

The Pirates fell down in their fielding in the latter part of the first game.

This Leifield made quite a hit with the fans. He passed his first man up, but put 'em over all the time after that.

Manager Clarke's coaching in the tenth inning did not suit Mr. Umpire Klem, and he chased Clarke to his bench.

The Third Nationals and Pittsburg left after the game for Pittsburg, where Labor day will be celebrated with two more games.

Wagner's work at short was brilliant. Several times he picked up difficult grounders and without recovering threw the runners out.

Casey got two-thirds of those hits in the first game and one of his smashes counted for three bases, and came at the proper time.

Wicker certainly was there with the goods. He had plenty of speed. In addition to allowing only three hits, he struck out nine men.

Slagle dropped a long fly from Brain's bat in the fourth inning of the second game. The "Rabbit" had a long run and just got to the ball, but he did not squeeze.

If Tinker had not temporarily fumbled Wagner's fast grounder in the sixth inning of the second game Clarke might not have scored the winning run. Joe grabbed the ball with one hand, but juggled it.

BIG CROWD TO SEE BOUT.

RECORD BREAKING ATTENDANCE EXPECTED AT BRITT-NELSON GO.

Battle Between Lightweights Promises to Be Bitter on Account of Rivalry and Because of Large Amount of Money to Be Won—Winner Will Take Down $55,000, Including $10,000 Side Bet—Four-Fifths of Colma Amphitheater Already Sold.

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The largest crowd that ever saw a Queensberry battle in California—perhaps the biggest crowd that ever gathered at a fight anywhere in the world—will surge through the gates of the specially constructed amphitheater next Saturday afternoon down in the meadow near Colma. Batling Nelson and Jimmy Britt, the two best lightweights now before the public, will meet in an open air contest which is scheduled for forty-five rounds. It will be a bitter battle, which must occupy a chapter by itself in the history of the prize ring.

There is everything about the contest to mark it as an epoch making event. The intense rivalry between the two men, accentuated as it has been by months of bitter estrangement, comes as a positive assurance that everything will be above board and absolutely "on the level."

The winner take all provision in the articles will mean that the winner will receive in the neighborhood of $45,000—coupled to a side bet of $10,000, and stamps the contest as unique.

The sale of seats for the big battle opened yesterday, and 80 per cent of the seats were sold. The capacity is $70,000, of which $12,000 will be in bleacher seats. Before yesterday morning's sale opened all the $5 reserved seats were taken and a large proportion of the $10 seats were gone. Outside of the $20 boxes there is now left not more than one-fifth of the amphitheater, all of which, it is expected, will be taken in a day or so. In fact there is every prospect of the receipts being the largest of any fight held in this country.

Seek to Prevent Los Angeles Fight.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—If church people of this city can prevent it, next Tuesday night's fight between Willie Fitzgerald and Eddie Hanlon will not be pulled off. Manager Tom McCarey, however, says the scrap is scheduled as a twenty round "sparring contest," and that sparring contests are not forbidden by the laws of California. A petition has been filed with the fire commission by J. W. Frost, as chairman of a special committee representing 100 Los Angeles churches, requesting the mayor and chief of police to enforce the law "in preventing such a disgraceful and demoralizing exhibition." The petition also asks the fire commissioners to investigate the new Pacific Athletic club hall, where the fight is to be held, as the petitioners believe it is dangerous.

TODAY'S METROPOLITAN MEET.

High School and Other Athletes to Compete Under A. A. U. Sanction in Handicap Games.

High school, Y. M. C. A., Athletic club, and a sprinkling of University of Chicago athletes will meet in the handicap games of the Metropolitan Athletic association's handicap track and field games at the association's grounds, Sixty-ninth street and Ashland avenue, this afternoon. The meet is held under the sanction of the Central A. A. U., eleven events being on the card to be decided, eight of them being open events and three special events.

DUNDON LEAVES THE HOSPITAL.

Sox Injured Infielder Goes to His Home in Pittsburg—May Play in Ten Days.

Cleveland, O., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Gus Dundon, Chicago's second baseman, who had his head cracked in an accident at League park yesterday, was so much better today the authorities at the St. Clair street hospital permitted him to leave for his home in Pittsburg this morning. It will be a week or ten days, according to their calculations, before he will be in shape for active work again.

Pewaukee, Wis., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The result of the twelve championship races for the Phelps trophies was announced by ex-Commodore Nelson today. Albatross, the W. H. Meyer boat, won the class A cup with a total of 846.7 points. R. E. Gilhorn's Argo got second position with 486.1 points, and the Pabst Comet II. scored 445.7. In the one design catboat class H. J. Zefeld's J. got first with 950 to its credit. George Kieckhefer's H. scored 756, and R. Rem's F. 325 points. Andrew Nelson presented the cups to the victors this afternoon. The closing race of the P. Y. C. will be sailed on Monday with the start at 10 a. m.

PLAN TO BUILD $2,000,000 TRACK.

James Butler and Empire City Stockholders to Reconstruct Course.

WILL EQUAL BELMONT.

Jockey Club Officials Watch New Horses Running at Sheepshead Bay.

New York, Sept. 3.—[Special.]—James Butler and fellow stockholders in the Empire City track at Yonkers have purchased a large amount of territory adjacent to the track and the entire plant will be rebuilt on a stupendous scale, with the idea of establishing a race course on the present site that will be equal to Belmont park. It is said more than $2,000,000 will be spent in the new venture, which will include the building of a railroad spur from the New York and Harlem road at Mount Vernon, with a prospective connection with the subway and elevated roads in the course of time.

The track has not had a running meeting for several years.

Every day some new turfman who has been operating in the west or Canada shows up here with the idea of racing horses on the Jockey club tracks. There are so many new owners and horses running in the east just now that it is a difficult task to keep track of them all. The Jockey club officials are keeping the newcomers under close inspection, too, although from outward appearances nobody would believe this to be a fact because of the unfamiliarity with these western horses. Form has dwindled to a guessing match, with the public at a distinct disadvantage. There is an occasional unwarranted cry of fraud, but on the whole the stewards have done their best to keep the racing clean.

Denial from Trevelyan.

The fact that Edward Corrigan has been accused of trying to race some horses in the east in the name of D. H. Barnes, with Green B. Morris as trainer, has brought a strong denial in behalf of Corrigan from Francis Trevelyan of the American Turf association. Trevelyan said that Corrigan had actually sold the horses in question to Barnes, who, contrary to report, is no relative of the master of Hawthorne, but is a full blooded turfman of the amateur class, who believes in racing horses for the sport there is in it. Barnes is a rich contractor, who makes New Orleans and Kansas City his business headquarters, and who wishes it understood that he has purchased the horses running in his name from Corrigan in a legitimate way.

This will be the last week at Sheepshead Bay, and there should be a wealth of high class sprinters. The leading event is the $35,000 annual champion stakes, at two miles and a quarter, to be run on Saturday. According to the arrangements of weights, 3 year olds will carry 112 pounds and 4 year olds and upwards 124 pounds, with penalties and allowances. Sysonby probably will be a starter, inasmuch as the race is worth $20,000 to the winner, and the Melton colt came out of the Century as sound as a bell. As the famous mare Artful will not be a starter, according to the present plans of Trainer Rogers, Sysonby will have this race up to form.

Sysonby Picks Up Penalty.

Sysonby will pick up a three pound penalty, which will make his weight 115 pounds, the burden he carried so easily in the Century. At Gravesend Sysonby is engaged in the first and second specials, for one of which he probably will be a starter.

The most important 2 year old event this week is the Great Eastern handicap at six furlongs, also to be decided on Saturday. Not until the announcement of weights will it be possible to get a line on the probable field. Unfortunately Yankee Consul, winner of the Flatbush stakes, is not eligible, but he can start in the Autumn stakes on Tuesday, the Flight stakes on Thursday, or the Golden Rod stakes on Friday.

STARTER BROWN IS STABBED.

Slashed with a Knife for Resenting Remark Made to His Wife on Street at Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—H. D. ("Curley") Brown, the starter and owner of the Majestic theater in Cincinnati, was cut and slashed in the back by some "bad men" just outside his hotel early this morning.

Brown was escorting his wife and sister. One of the gang spoke offensively to Mrs. Brown, and the turfman at once went for the offender. The others aided their pal against Brown, who was holding his own fairly well against the odds until one of the toughs slashed him across the back, just below the left shoulder. The affair happened right in the heart of the city, and the police were not long in arresting two of the gang. One, named Shirley Howe, had a bloody clasp knife in his pocket, the police claim.

Six stitches were taken in Brown's wound, which is an inch deep. Tonight he makes light of it and insists he will be at Latonia to do the starting Monday afternoon, but his physician scouts the idea.

Judge Murphy probably will undertake the starting tomorrow and Jake Holtman will be here Tuesday.

San Toy and America Recovered.

Michigan City, Ind., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—The crew of the capsized yacht San Toy of the Jackson Park Yacht club, which turned turtle off the port Saturday afternoon during the races, having abandoned the craft, the tug Huffnung went out today and brought the derelict into the harbor. The boat was found ten miles east of the city. The yacht America, which was disabled by losing its mast during yesterday's race, later went ashore, east of here, and will be brought in by the life saving crew tonight. Both America and San Toy were damaged slightly.

DOES W. J. C. PLAN COUP?

REPORT THAT TURF ORGANIZATION IS ABOUT TO STRIKE.

At Latonia the Belief Is an Early Winter Meeting at the Oaklawn Track, Hot Springs, May Be Intended, and That It Will Be Discussed at Today's Meeting of Stewards in This City—Minnie Adams Best of 2 Year Old Fillies in West.

Latonia, Ky., Sept. 3.—[Special.]—Judge George G. Perkins, member of the board of stewards of the Western Jockey club, and formerly president and controlling owner of the Latonia racecourse, left Cincinnati tonight for Chicago to attend the September meeting of the Western Jockey club stewards on Monday, and although wild horses could not make him divulge what is on the tapis, his conversation indicated something special is coming up that needs the consideration of the whole body of stewards, or as many of them as possible.

For ten days there have been persistent rumors here that the Western Jockey club is clearing its decks for action, and is on the eve of granting dates for a race meeting to open soon somewhere; furthermore, that this will be the signal for a renewal of continuous racing under the auspices of the Western Jockey club. When every point of the compass has been canvassed the discussion invariably ends in picking John Condon's model racing plant, Oaklawn, at Hot Springs, as the most likely scene of Western Jockey club activity. Consequently, it may be something more than a mere coincidence that following closely on Judge Perkins' sudden appearance here, it was noised about that there is likely to be racing throughout December at Essex Park, six miles from Hot Springs, under American Turf association jurisdiction.

Minnie Adams' four performances since she resumed racing three weeks ago have set horsemen to wondering if, after all, she is not the queen of the western 2 year olds this year. If she is not, then she belies her appearance, for she is a grander looking filly than Zienap, Lady Toddington, Helena C., or Sister Frances.

What some cannot understand is how "Bill" Phillips could pick the light boned, greyhoundy Beautiful Bess for an eastern campaign in preference to Minnie Adams. There is no denying Beautiful Bess' speed, but for carrying it six furlongs with weight up, Minnie Adams looks worth two of her, and no doubt could tie her up in knots, just as she did Charlie Eastman yesterday.

There is no denying his speed either, and the first quarter mile of that race he was trying to pull Dale Austin out of the saddle. He ran it in :23 4-5, with his mouth wide open, but another quarter at the same high speed took all the starch out of him, and in the fifth furlong Minnie Adams simply ran off from him. In spite of running quite wide around the turn into the home stretch, Fred Cook's extra good filly opened up a lead of six lengths in less than an eighth of a mile, and watches caught her five furlongs in 1:00.

GENTLEMEN DRIVERS AND DERBY RIDERS TO TRY AGAIN.

Matinee Harness Races Postponed from Saturday May Be Held at the Washington Park Track Today.

If the sun comes out enough this forenoon to dry out the Washington Park club racetrack the Gentlemen's Driving club of Chicago will carry out the second day's program of the intercity matinee which twice has been postponed. If the matinee is held the Gentlemen's Derby will be a feature of the afternoon's sport.

Yesterday the track was heavy and while the wind was strong the light rain last night again did damage to the prospects of good going. The chances appear to be against a track that will permit of harness racing this afternoon, but if it is possible to do so the races will be held.

Lou Dillon was scheduled to go against the watch and several races were on the program as originally arranged.

The Derby is to be run in three divisions. In the first Elliott Durand, Charles A. Stevens, B. F. De Muth, and H. A. Hansen are scheduled to ride. In the second division Judge Hanecy, A. E. Ashbrook, Gene Sullivan, and P. M. Hanney are listed. Those entered for the third division are George Ford Morris, J. M. Crennan, and George H. Swift.

HOLIDAY EVENTS ON GOLF LINKS.

Midlothian Members Will Compete for the George R. Thorne Cup.

OTHER CLUBS' PROGRAMS.

Fourth Annual Suburban Tournament to Start at Hinsdale Thursday.

Holiday events are scheduled at all of the local golf clubs today and at several contests begun on Saturday will be continued. The rain of Friday and Saturday left most of the courses in bad shape, but the wind of yesterday helped to restore them to fair playing condition and unless rain falls today the going will be good enough to permit of play over the full routes.

Midlothian members will compete in the qualifying round for the George R. Thorne cup, emblematic of the individual championship, play continuing through the week. Auburn Park, Riverside, and Calumet golfers will compete in their respective championship tournaments. The schedule is as follows:

Calumet—Qualifying round for club championship, Robertson cup, and minor events.
Midlothian—Annual club championship.
Glen View—Members' thirty-six hole handicap.
Edgewater—One day scratch tournament. Three flights of eight to qualify.
Wheaton—Play for president's cup; two ball foursome.
La Grange—Four ball handicap foursome.
Evanston—Blind bogey handicap; two ball foursome.
Windsor—One day tournament at 10 a. m.; mixed foursome in afternoon.
Auburn Park—First round championship and flight cups.
Maywood—Play for club championship; special events.
Homewood—Kickers' blind bogey handicap.
Ellerslie—Morning, ball sweep; afternoon, mixed foursome.
Onwentsia—Choice score thirty-six hole handicap; weight for youth handicap for Slason Thompson prize.
Ravisloe—Match play championship tournament.
Riverside—Match rounds for championship; choice score thirty-six hole match; eighteen hole handicap in afternoon.
Skokie—Qualifying round for president's and directors' cups. Bogey handicap in afternoon, three classes.
Elmhurst—Mixed foursome handicap.
Irving—Choice score event.
Exmoor—One day age limit tournament, junior, senior, and patriarch classes; consolation handicap in the afternoon.

Events also are carded at Ridge and Ravenswood.

The fourth annual suburban tournament will be held at the Hinsdale club on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday. The event is open to players from the Hinsdale, Riverside, and La Grange clubs of 16 years of age and upward. Play will start Thursday afternoon with the qualifying round at eighteen holes, sixteen to qualify. Two match play rounds are carded for Friday and a two ball foursome handicap in the afternoon. Semi-finals and finals for the championship will be played on Saturday, and an eighteen hole bogey handicap in the afternoon. Entries close with C. E. Boutwood at Hinsdale on Sept. 7.

The "Exmoor Dozen club" will be founded on Saturday, play being at eighteen holes. The twelve low scorers will receive E. D. C. stickpins. Holders of these are open to challenge from other members and are bound to accept. All challenge matches must be played on Saturday or Sunday.

MAKES NEW DUMBBELL RECORD

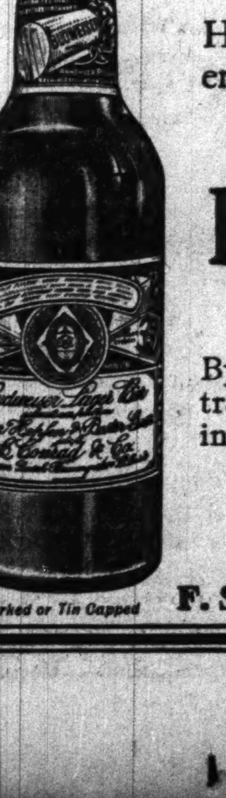

Henry Leveson Lifts the Weights 9,000 Consecutive Times in 5 Hours and 41 Minutes.

By raising two ten pound dumbbells 9,000 consecutive times Henry Leveson of this city broke the world record in a trial at Aldine hall during Saturday night and early yesterday morning. The test of endurance was witnessed by several hundred spectators.

Leveson's time for the new record was 5 hours and 41 minutes, and during the long grind his strength was kept up by nourishment given him at frequent intervals by an attendant. He finished comparatively fresh, and made the last 1,000 lifts in 36 minutes. The former record was made in 1870 by Pennock of Philadelphia, who raised the weights 8,431 times. Pennock, however, lifted from the shoulders up, while Leveson in the record just established lifted from arm's length up and down. On March 8, 1898, Leveson accomplished 4,500 lifts in 2 hours and 49 minutes.

The dumbbells used were officially weighed prior to the test and were found to be slightly over twenty pounds. Walter P. Steffens officiated as referee and timekeeper.

CHURCH A "CLOSED SHOP"

PASTOR SAYS THIS WAS CONDITION IN MIDDLE AGES.

In Sixth Presbyterian Pulpit the Rev. William P. Merrill Discusses Attitude of Religious Bodies Toward Labor Movement—Asserts Unions Should Be Judged by Ideals, Not Deeds, and Finds Parallel in History—Others Preach on Subject.

The problems suggested by Labor day were taken as pulpit topics by several Chicago pastors yesterday. The general assembly of the Presbyterian church had asked ministers to speak on the labor movement.

The Rev. William P. Merrill, at the Sixth Presbyterian church, preached on, "What Should Be the Attitude of Christian Men and Women of the Church Toward the Labor Movement?" In the middle ages, he said, the church was as much a closed shop as unions demand now.

"First of all," said he, "the church must have no class discriminations and no sympathies for one class as against another. The church is appealed to from one side and the other to array itself here or there. But it must stand eternally between, resisting equally the demand of selfish capital that it administer an opiate to keep working men quiet while it plunders them, and the demand of the wild agitator that it fly the red flag side by side with the banner of the cross.

"The second thing church and Christians should do is to judge the movement by its ideals ever more than by its deeds. There are men who know so much of broken contracts and terrorising tactics and brutality on the part of labor leaders that they find it hard to see any good in the movement. Every evil we censure in the labor movement has appeared at some time in the story of the church. There never was such a closed shop as the church in the middle ages. No nonunion workman was ever treated so cruelly as was the outsider by the church.

"The church and the Christian should be even more than just, should be generous in judgment. So Christ would judge, and our plain duty is to follow him."

Sympathizes with Unions.

The Rev. Willard Brown Thorp preached a Labor day sermon at the South Congregational church.

"The labor unions are in the midst of a long, hard struggle with which in the main we must sympathize," he said. "They are under a great deal of criticism, from which they will learn the necessary lessons. The failure of violence is universally recognized. Labor leaders must clear themselves of every suspicion of double dealing, or neither their men nor the public will stand by them.

"There are two important steps which I would most earnestly commend to union men.

"Adopt some change in your organization which will emphasize the superiority of the better workman.

"Make your organization broad enough so that there will be place within it for men who in each establishment, are actually managing the business and directing the work. Treat them not as antagonists but as fellow workers. The great mistake of labor and capital today is that each is organizing apart from the other."

Carpenters Hear a Sermon.

The carpenters of Woodlawn attended the Oakwoods Union church, where the Rev. Frank C. Bruner, pastor, preached on the subject of "The Carpenter of Nazareth." He said in part:

"It is an attractive picture to see the toilers in regiments by the hundred, in their march of triumph to and from their field of toil. The heroic of the labor world will not be known until the books are opened.

"There is no such division between capital and labor as some agitators would make believe. Strife which has broken many a heart is contrary to the thought of the Carpenter of Nazareth, the greatest friend toiling ever had."

Tribute Due to Labor.

The Rev. N. P. Tedrick, pastor of St. Paul's Methodist church, considered that a tribute was due to labor.

"We do well when we celebrate on one day of the year the heroism of the soldiers of the rebellion," he said. "And it is equally meet and right that we at this season devote one day to tributes of love and esteem for that brave army that grapples with the stubborn things of nature for all of our necessaries and luxuries."

REVIEWS CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE.

President Describes the Work of the Society at Closing Meeting of Convention.

The closing meeting of the four day convention of the Christian alliance held in the First Methodist church was held yesterday. The Rev. A. B. Simpson, president of the alliance, preached on the text, "Cast Thy Bread Upon the Waters." He reviewed the work of the alliance since its organization and explained that the first days of the alliance were experimental days and that the work put upon foreign missions then was merely bread cast upon the waters, which returned many fold. The field of foreign missions was given the greater part of the address and members of the alliance were asked to contribute to the cause.

CHICAGO DEATH RATE LOWER.

Health Department Bulletin Shows Decrease—Mortality Among Children Increases.

The death rate in Chicago shows a slight decrease, according to the weekly bulletin issued by the health department. An increase in mortality among children is noted. The bulletin says in part:

"While there have been 417 more deaths reported during the first eight months of 1905 than during the similar period of last year, the rate in proportion to population is slightly lower—the respective rates per thousand being 14.04 this year and 14.09 last year. The increase has been in the age-period under 5 years—1,294 excess, but 1,043 fewer in the ages over 20 years.

"Statement of mortality for the first eight months of 1905, compared with the corresponding period of 1904: Death rates computed on United States census bureau's mid-year populations—1,900,750 for 1905, and of 1,882,315 for 1904."

ORPHANS' HOME OPENS SOON.

Marks Nathan Charitable Institution Will Be Ready for Occupancy Within a Few Weeks.

The Marks Nathan Jewish Orphans' home, on Wood street, near Division, which will have room for about 100 orphans, will be opened early in the fall.

The building was completed last year as a free Hebrew school at a cost of almost $50,000. It was found to be too large for the purpose of a school, and it was transferred a few weeks ago to the Marks Nathan Jewish Orphans' home.

The nucleus of the fund for the institution's support was a bequest of $15,000 by the late Marks Nathan. Under the management of the president, Mr. Jacob Levy, the funds have been growing apace, mostly from small contributions of the Ghetto Jews.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

FOR SALE—SEE OUR FARMERS FOR BED ROCK FACTS ABOUT NORTH DAKOTA.
We would be foolish to use this expensive space to make one single statement that wasn't well inside the truth, for you would be too disappointed to buy when you saw the land. Here are some of the reasons why 2,500 farmers, mostly from the Central Western States, have bought land from us in North Dakota: The land at home was good for winter wheat, perhaps, but if it was an "off year" for wheat they got no crop. Their new land in North Dakota raises ANYTHING; some of it's in fife wheat, some in macaroni wheat, oats, barley, speltz, corn, potatoes, peas, beans, cabbage, and cucumbers, and a good portion of it is in its native pasture. Besides, "back East" there is usually too much rain or a lack of it, and the land gets watersoaked, while in North Dakota there is always sufficient moisture to properly mature the crops. If you are a farmer and will come with us to North Dakota we will show you a farmer's country, settled by farmers who are excellent judges of land. They will tell you the "bed rock facts" about North Dakota better than we can. We have rich farming land for sale for $12 to $18 an acre, and if you hurry up we will locate you on a homestead of 160 acres. WM. H. BROWN CO., 131 La Salle-st., Chicago, Ill., or Mandan, N. Dakota.

LAWSON'S HAND IS FELT.

BOSTON FINANCIER GIVES SMALL BULLS A TURN.

They Start a Slight Downward Trend in Prices, but Influential and Large Traders Refuse to Be Moved—The General Public Shown Not to Have Been a Factor in Wall Street for Eighteen Months—Factors in the Money Market.

Thomas W. Lawson is demonstrating that he has influence in the market—not at all times, but sometimes. An instance of the latter was afforded in the course of prices last week, for it was a Lawson market.

However much his manners and methods may be decried by those whom he combats, it must be admitted that he has a following. And the size of fluctuations in prices may be taken to indicate the degree of influence which this following has in making or disturbing quotations. Those who follow Mr. Lawson are not the so-called well informed traders. They are small people who, not knowing what better to believe, believe what Mr. Lawson says. And, while he has said much that remains unverified, he has also predicted much that has since come to pass.

But this following is not influential. It might be if there were more small traders in the market. Lawson's influence is with the public, and the public, in a large way, has been conspicuously out of Wall street doings in the last eighteen months. What fluctuations there were last week show how much of a public there is to be frightened and of what small consequence it is.

The men of large wealth and the rich pools have not yet been disturbed. And not until they see enough in conditions to warrant selling will there be any occasion to expect a big break, and certainly nothing like a panic is in sight. That the price of copper metal has been fictitiously advanced is declared to be a fact by trade authorities. That consumers have bought supplies for many months ahead is declared to be a fact in the trade. It appears, therefore, that in Lawson's last assault on the position of Amalgamated Copper he has a trade position of the metal behind him that warrants some attention to his utterances.

Some Important Factors.

The money market is another factor which may help the Lawson campaign. The season of the year is at hand when money normally works higher. It is a known situation, though there may be different dates on which its influence begins to be felt. No one expects stringent rates, yet it is believed that they later will be higher than now, and when they do advance the sentimental effect on the stock market will make for lower prices.

What the course of the market will be in a large way, will depend upon what the rich pools and rich individual speculators think of the situation. Lawson will not jar them, but if they think the market, if left to its course, may fall away 10 or 15 points, a sufficient volume of large speculative holdings will come on the market to accelerate the decline. Men who habitually carry from 20,000 to 50,000 shares sometimes turn quickly, and when it becomes known that such a line is coming out, the company on the bear side will soon be large and influential.

Another factor that must in time be recognized is the assembling of congress. With the subjects which it is known will come before it there can hardly fail to be times when uncertainty will be followed by selling.

But suppose the market should ease from 10 to 15 points. Its position is fundamentally so strong the large losses would be paper profits. The people who own the stocks cannot be routed by such a decline. They bought securities when they were much lower than they are now. They will be scared into liquidation when the tide of prosperity turns, when there are symptoms of falling earnings, but not when the price of copper metal finds its proper level.

Market at the Moment.

The immediate course of the market must be a matter of conjecture, but the Lawson episode is apparently over. Underlying conditions are so good that there may be rallies from present prices this week. But it may be noted again that the money situation must be reckoned with, and it seems reasonable to believe that important banking interests, knowing this situation, will refrain from buying stocks at this time, leaving the market something of a traders' one, in which small incidents may have a temporary effect on prices.

The bank statement of Saturday gave some indication of what may be coming. There was a loss in cash of $7,103,500. The excess reserve was brought down to $5,496,325. This compares with $47,503,400 last year and $17,296,975 in 1903. The surplus at this time is relatively low, and the crop movement demand is only fairly well begun. Owing to the size of the corn crop the demand later on may be as heavy as last year, and in that event the outlook for the excess reserve is not favorable.

Trade Conditions Are Healthy.

Changes in the wholesale markets during the week were few and largely for the better. Inquiry for and buying of fall and winter lines in the dry goods and clothing lines was showing the same steady gain noted for several weeks. The movement of crops in the northwest was on the increase, and in the central and southwestern states was about holding its own, and this conversion of produce into money helped the country trade in all lines. Building operations were maintaining their recent activity.

Rails for 1906 Wanted.

Buying for future delivery was in full swing in the metal trade, and the market was firm. Of the situation the Iron and Machinery World says:

"More than 300,000 tons of steel rails for 1906 delivery have been sold within the last week. This represents the production of six months and therefore fills up the mills to about July 1 of next year. It has been one of the most remarkably active weeks in years. It needed only the announcement that the mills had fixed the price of rails for 1906 delivery to bring into the market most of the strong western railroad systems. Five of them have bought in lots ranging from 50,000 to 75,000 tons each, and there are other inquiries in the market. This haste of the western railroads to buy is in striking contrast with the slowness of last year. The deduction seems obvious that the railroad managers are anticipating a splendid business, both for the steel mills and for the railroads. Accompanying this large trading in rails there is good buying of track material. There is decided weakness in wrought pipe and in sheets, due apparently to one of those outbursts of competition that occur semi-occasionally. The structural mills are not doing business for next year except in a moderate way. And the plate mills are averse to the acceptance of extended deliveries. Nor are billets readily bought for 1906 shipment. Trade in pig iron was fair."

"Aside from screenings, of which there is a serious accumulation in Chicago," says the Black Diamond, "the coal situation shows a slight improvement, and with the advancement of the season it is probable that prices will reach a better basis. This is almost certain if there is the expected car shortage and reasonably cold weather during the consuming period for domestic use."

MARKETS FREE OF WAR SCARES

First Time in Months London Exchange Is Not Affected by News from Far East.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Sept. 3.—For the first time in many months the London markets are without domination of events in the far east. The conclusion of peace naturally will give great stimulus to business in the stock exchange and the money market, but it has not been maintained, and the blame is thrown primarily on New York and on the decline there due to fears of dear money and the recent bear raid.

Another factor which has proved a check to improvement has been the sugar crisis in France, which caused much forced selling here on French account. That this check will prove temporary is the common belief of those best able to read signs. In spite of it there has been an advance in giltedged securities as well as in both Russian and Japanese bonds. In the Russians the rise was far greater, as much as 5½ per cent in fours, and within forty-eight hours after the announcement of peace the greatest rise recorded in Japanese bonds was 1½ in 4½ per cents. The explanation vouchsafed is that Russian credit has more to gain by the conclusion of the war than Japan.

In the money market there was no change until Wednesday, when there was an all around advance in rates, though this occurred subsequent to the announcement of peace. Experts here say it is of no consequence except indirectly, and attribute it more to the sharp movement on the Paris exchange against this country.

WHEAT TRADE IN DOUBT.

PRICES DECLINE TWO CENTS, BUT MAKE A FULL RECOVERY.

Week Ends Practically Without Any Change—Traders Are Inclined to Go Slow on the Selling Side at a Level Which May Result at Any Time in Important Export Business — September Corn Bulls Stand Firm—Oats Slightly Easier.

A close at almost exactly the same prices which ruled at the end of the week before, in the face of September liquidation the early part of the week and in the face of a growing movement of new wheat in the northwest, was the feature in the wheat market for the period ending Saturday. There was a lack of response shown by foreign prices to weakness whenever it appeared in domestic markets, and a growing belief that with Liverpool futures on a shipping basis compared with our prices there is little profit to be made on the short side of the market, at present at least.

Vague but disquieting hints that the spring wheat yields were falling short of expectations in parts of the northwest also tended to curb the enthusiasm of short sellers who have succeeded in beating prices down to a level 24⅜@25⅜c under those of the corresponding date last year. For the entire week prices held within limits of 1⅝@2⅛c, and at the end September was only ⅛c lower than it was the Saturday before, while December closed at the exact figures ruling before the week's trading was started, and May 1-16c under.

The low point of the week came on Wednesday, and was 1⅝@1⅞c under the final level the previous week, and the high prices were made Saturday. The break culminated when September liquidation by holders who did not care for the real article was heaviest, and the rally followed hard upon a change to the buying side of the market by a leading elevator interest and several of the big professional traders.

Market Influences Are Varied.

Features of the outlook which the bulls used as arguments were the occasional export sales, albeit largely of Canadian wheats, the total business at the seaboard for the week reported at about 500,000 bu, a belief in some quarters that business has been larger than reported, and a better eastern demand here for No. 2 hard. Visible supply stocks also are slightly less than 1,000,000 bu larger than last year in spite of the early and liberal movement of winter wheat. Local public stocks, however, are nearly triple those of last year at this date, and public and private stocks exceed 5,000,000 bu, but elevators apparently are satisfied it will be wanted ultimately, although soft wheat was so unpopular as to be delivered freely on September contracts because it seems likely to earn storage until the present dull shipping demand livens up.

Receipts at Minneapolis and Duluth ran 1,000 cars over the total of the week before, and 430 cars over last year, and the closing day of the week saw the first increase in stocks at Minneapolis on the crop, a gain of 10,000 bu for the day. Primary receipts, however, fell 436,000 bu under last year. Premiums on new spot No. 1 northern declined from 6½@7½c over September to 1½c over, or about a level where lower grades can be mixed with it to make delivery profitable. Little was sent out on September contracts, however, the bulk of the first offerings finding their way to mills. To arrive bids declined from 3c over September to 2c over.

Little Change in Corn Situation.

With the arrival of September the corn trade can see a little more clearly what is going on or is likely to go on among the bull leaders in carrying out their September deal. The local trade can also realize a little better than before what effect some adverse weather conditions might have on the new crop months. A recent Washington bulletin declared that it will take till Sept. 15 to put the advanced corn out of the way of frost, and possibly Oct. 1 to secure the entire acreage, which will make weather the important influence for a time. Up to date the movement of corn from the western reserves to swamp the bull leaders, as the bears put it, has not been up to expectation, and apparently will not unless fancy prices after the middle of the month induce a lot of corn to move which is not now in sight.

Oats and Provisions.

Receipts of oats are no longer heavy enough to depress prices much, and the seaboard is reporting good export sales. The efforts on the part of local bears to force a further break have created a fair short interest, and indications were that a local leader has been accumulating a long line of May. The narrowness of the general trade has kept prices within narrow limits, and the close of the week saw a change of only ¼c in a downward direction in deferred months.
